"WOOD MEN SET TOO FAST A PACE ADVERTISING IN OHIO FOR HARDING TO FOLLOW"--DAUGHERTY

SEEK LIGHT ON SECRET BOOM FOR MR. M'ADOO

WASHINGTON, May 28.—Harry M. Daugherty, campaign manager for Senator Harding, Republican, of Ohio, was recalled to the witness stand today to testify further on presidential campaign expenditures in the inquiry being conducted by the senate committee.

Questioned by Senator Reed, the witness said two Ohio newspapers, the State Journal, and the Columbus Dispatch, had supported Senator Harding at first, but later had supported General Wood. Reed sought an explanation.

"I would be willing to go this far," Mr. Daugherty said, "there was a very active campaign around Columbus for General Wood."

"I've understood," said Senator Reed, "that Mr. Wolfe is the controlling factor of both papers and that he directed his policy to oppose Senator Harding and that later everything indicated the expenditure of large sums of money in the campaign."

"Mr. Wolfe pretended at first to support Senator Harding," Mr. Daugherty replied, "and afterwards went to the vigorous support of General Wood. I don't know if he was sincere in his first attitude toward Senator Harding."

"Is it true that very large expenditures were made on advertising in that Ohio campaign?" Senator Reed continued.

"There were expenditures of that kind—too expensive for us, and I didn't go into it," Mr. Daugherty replied. "Throughout the state of Ohio there was a very expensive campaign of advertising for General Wood, but we've no complaint about it. All the Republican papers were used, I understand, and some of the Democratic."

The committee also made further efforts to get light on what Chairman Kenyon described as "this invisible McAdoo boom."

Angus W. McLean, of North Carolina, a director of the war finance corporation, was examined. He denied that he was "a sort of Southern manager" for Mr. McAdoo's campaign and attempted to read a prepared statement.

"I know there is a McAdoo campaign," interjected Senator Reed, Democrat, of Missouri. "I move we go ahead with this witness with some questions and let the statement go until we find out why this secrecy."

Replying to a rapid fire of questions, Mr. McLean declared that he did not know there was a McAdoo headquarters in Washington or in the Pennsylvania hotel, New York, and that he was not informed as to the source of McAdoo literature sent to Democratic delegates.

He finally recounted a conversation with Mr. McAdoo as to the North Carolina delegation.

"I told Mr. McAdoo there was an

Johnson Will Not Bolt If He Loses The Nomination

CHICAGO, May 28—Beer, light wines and prohibition will not be mentioned in the Republican national convention, if present plans of party leaders are carried out, it was learned today.

Directors of the party's policies have decided that the question has been settled, and neither a "wet" nor a "dry" plank, nor endorsement of any modification of the present "bone dry" rule, will be incorporated in the platform, according to Samuel A. Perkins, national committeeman from Washington.

The prohibition question and its possible effect on the forthcoming presidential campaign, has been under consideration by party leaders for several months, it is known. The matter was discussed at national committee meetings here as far back as last January. One member of the national committee who is here said today that the committeemen believed the "wets" to be in the minority and that the country as a whole wanted prohibition.

National committeemen who are gathering here for the opening of the contest Monday received with interest today the reports of Senator Hiram W. Johnson's speech at Concord, North Carolina, in which he denied he would "bolt" the convention if not nominated. The probable attitude of the senator in the event of defeat in the convention has been the source of speculation for weeks along "presidential row" and his pronouncement on the subject was received with visible relief.

"I am glad to hear that," said A. T. Hart, of Kentucky, chairman on the convention committee on arrangements. "I have thought all along that that would be Mr. Johnson's position."

Senator Johnson will enter the convention with 109 instructed delegates running second to Major General Leonard Wood, who has 153 votes pledged to him. Governor Frank O. Lowden is third in the list with 74 votes.

With approval today by the city building inspector of the temporary galleries, installed to add 1,000 extra seats to the normal capacity of the coliseum, Charles R. Hall, superintendent of the building, notified the convention committee that he would have the hall ready to turn over to the Republicans late next week.

EX-KAISER IS NOW A TAILOR

LONDON, May 28.—William of Hohenzollern, former emperor of Germany, is trying his hand as a tailor, according to a Central News dispatch from Amsterdam. He is cutting out patterns for many new suits with which he is going to stock his wardrobe and the dispatch quotes a trade paper as declaring he is "excelling at the job."

"How unfortunate it is," says this paper, "that William missed his vocation. After all the notoriety he achieved as an emperor, one can imagine what would have been his fame as a tailor."

Parleying On Soldier Relief Continues

WASHINGTON, May 28—Supporters of soldier relief legislation planned today to block all other measures hoping in that way to expedite consideration by the house, of the pending bill. Democrats and Republicans joined in what they styled their "crusade" to bring action from the Republican steering committee.

Leaders still planned to ask for a suspension of rules for six days beginning Saturday, during which time they stated, the bill would be considered. Debate on the relief measure during the past few days has centered around the supposed Democratic opposition. Republicans charged repeatedly that such opposition exists and Democrats emphatically denying that they hate to vote against the measure when it comes up before the house.

Shaves And Haircuts Drop

NEW YORK, May 28.—Prices of shaves and haircuts in New York soon will be cut to 15 and 35 cents, respectively, according to Leon Worthal, general organizer of the International Barbers Union. The cut rates will be made in new barber shops which today will be opened by the barbers' union or individual members, he said.

Barbers in the new places, he said, will receive the union scale of $3 a week, with 50 per cent of all earnings above receipts of $12 a week. Tipping will not be barred. Thirty-five cents will be the price also for a massage, shampoo, singe or manicure.

Cut Down Permits On Liquor

WASHINGTON, May 28.—In an effort to defeat the "indiscriminate sale" of liquor on physicians' prescriptions, Commissioner Williams, of the bureau of internal revenue, issued a ruling today limiting the number of permits allowed each physician to 100 for each three months, except with "good cause."

The order, which Mr. Williams said was issued "after weeks of study and the investigation of records of scores of physicians," makes it obligatory on the part of the physician to show where the liquor has gone before more prescription blanks will be issued by the bureau.

Officials said that while expecting a "flood of protests," such an order was "clearly within the administrative provisions of the Volstead act."

"It may be some hardship," said Mr. Williams, "but we believe that reputable physicians will not object to advising agents of the government the nature of their requirement when more than 100 permits are needed for three months. Prohibition agents, of course, must use judgment in issuing new books of permits or withholding them. They will not refuse to issue them where a physician is dealing with an epidemic or where his practice is that of a specialist."

FAVOR EMBARGO ON EXPORT OF SUGAR

WASHINGTON, May 28.—By a vote of six to three, the senate agriculture committee today ordered a favorable report on the McNary bill providing for an export embargo on sugar.

Those supporting the bill were Senators McNary of Oregon, Capper of Kansas, Kenyon of Iowa, and Norris, Nebraska, Republicans, and Harrison, Mississippi, and Kendrick of Wyoming, Democrats. Senators Smith of Georgia; Smith, South Carolina, and Ransdell of Louisiana, Democrats, opposed it.

Before taking final action the committee amended the measure so that it would not affect sugar sent to the United States by foreign countries or their nationals to be refined. Early consideration of the bill is planned by Senator McNary.

Here are the men who lead the Republican "irreconcilables" in the fight on the peace treaty and the league of nations. All their influence at the Republican national convention next month will be used in a fight against the league, either with or without reservations.

HERE'S REAL WAY TO HANDLE SPEEDERS

ATHENS, Greece, May 28.—Policemen of this city have an effective and rather unique method of curbing speeding autoists. Officers posted along the principal streets carry planks studded with long sharp nails, and when they see a car approaching at a rate they believe is excessive, they drop the plank in front of the machine. If the car is speeding, it cannot be stopped in time, and as a result its tires are punctured, but if the machine is proceeding at a reasonable pace it can be stopped before the plank is reached.

The chief of police finds the system is cheaper than maintaining a motorcycle squad, and has the additional advantage of making the capture of speeders comparatively easy.

Both Claim Gubernatorial Nomination

WHEELING, W. VA., May 28—Returns from Tuesday's primary election in West Virginia, compiled early today by the Intelligencer showed Senator Howard Sutherland leading General Leonard Wood for the Republican presidential preference. The vote from 52 of the 55 counties in the state gave:

Sutherland 43,957; Wood 35,203.

Both S. B. Montgomery and E. F. Morgan claimed the Republican nomination for governor on the face of incomplete returns from all counties. Latest figures gave Morgan 43,255; Montgomery, 41,720. Montgomery campaign managers announced today that they would demand recounts in eight counties. For the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, returns from 43 counties gave: A. B. Koontz 16,580; A. B. Littlepage 15,190.

Call Troops To Quell Rioters

BRISTOL, R. I., May 28.—Three troops of militia were ordered out by Governor Beeckman today after a riot in which strike sympathizers attacked young women clerks and other working employes of the National India Rubber Company. The governor's proclamation declares the town in a state of insurrection. The plant has been closed except for the office force and repairmen since the strike began three weeks ago.

Rigorous Terms In The Turkish Peace Treaty

WASHINGTON, May 28.—Terms of peace imposed upon the Turks, more rigorous than any previous summaries have indicated, were revealed to the Greek chamber of deputies last week in Athens by Premier Venizelos, a summary of whose address was received today by the state department.

"The Turkish treaty," according to Venizelos, "accords to Turkey only local autonomy, which may, in due time, and should the people so determine, be converted into independence."

In the small southeastern area of Europe, in which Turkey is left a last foothold, Venizelos declared, her forces are limited by the treaty to 700 men.

Constantinople is retained by the sultan, the Greek premier explained, with the reservation that he "will not violate the conditions of the peace treaty. Should such stipulations be violated, the powers have the right to modify their decisions regarding Constantinople."

The Turkish army is limited to a militia of 35,000 men to be organized by Europeans, 15 per cent of the officers of which must be foreigners. Distribution of the militia shall be dependent upon the advice and decision of the inter-allied commission.

The full text of the treaty as handed the Turkish delegates in Paris, May 11, has been received by the state department. Since the delegates have until June 11 in which to present their objections as basis for a possible revision, the treaty will not be made public in its entirety until the final draft has been adopted.

HARD COAL MINERS WILL NOT STRIKE

WILKESBARRE, PA., May 28—Anthracite mine workers will abide by any decision of the presidential coal commission to settle their wage dispute, and all danger of a stoppage of work in the hard coal region has passed, Thomas Kennedy, president of District No. 7, declared here today. He said that the miners in refusing yesterday to consider a strike at this time, and in accepting a commission, had adopted "the only logical and honorable course."

Delegates who attended the tri-district convention, which adjourned yesterday, expressed satisfaction over their action, but were unanimous in asserting that if it had not been for the Lever act, they would have voted to declare war on the anthracite operators. Demands to be placed by the miners before the presidential commission, as outlined here by leaders of the union will be for a 27 percent increase in wages, universal eight hour day and complete recognition of the union by a closed shop contract.

The sub-committee of operators and miners in charge of the negotiations will meet in Washington with Secretary of Labor Wilson on either Monday or Tuesday of next week to lay plans for presentations to the commission, which will render its award in sixty days after starting hearings.

$31,000 IN FINES FOR PROFITE'RING

SYRACUSE, N. Y., May 28.—Weeds, Inc., Binghampton clothiers, tried in United States court under Justice Martin Manton here, were found guilty this morning on all of eight counts in a federal indictment charging them with profiteering.

The court imposed a fine of $31,000 upon the firm.

Six counts covered sales actually made and a fine of $5,000 was imposed for each of them.

The charges in these counts were as follows:

The sale of a suit of clothes costing $20.00 for $40.00.

The sale of a suit costing $12.10 for $40.00. The defense disputed the cost price, claiming it was $21, instead of $12.50.

The sale of another suit for $45, the cost price being fixed at $23.50.

The sale of a suit costing $17.82 for $45.00.

The sale of a suit of clothes for $29.50, the cost price of the suit having been $11.75.

The sale of a suit costing $23.26 to a millionaire for $60.

The fine, as imposed by Judge Manton, is the largest that has been passed in the United States following a conviction for profiteering.

Department of Justice officials here today declared the conviction was the second secured against a large and long established concern, conducting a prosperous business, in the entire country.

State Slate Is Picked By Prohibitionists

COLUMBUS, O., May 28—Declaration of war against the cigaret and endorsement of a presidential candidate and a state slate featured the convention of the Ohio prohibition party here late yesterday and last night.

The fight against sale of cigarets and also against sale of habit forming drugs, was embodied in a declaration of principles adopted by the convention.

Rev. H. K. Miller of Dayton, one of the delegates, declared the people of the United States had done wrong in subscribing to the tobacco fund for soldiers during the war, saying, "We were made the dupes of the tobacco trust."

Rev. A. S. Watkins of Germantown, twice candidate for governor and once for the vice presidency on the prohibition ticket is the party's choice for president. The state slate is as follows:

Governor, John A. Henderson, Dayton; Lieutenant governor, E. E. Rich, Cleveland; secretary of state, Ellis Jenkins, Youngstown; treasurer, W. B. Patton, Warren; Mrs. Viola D. Romans, Columbus; justice of the supreme court, A. L. Talcott, Cleveland.

The planks in the party's platform, adopted by the convention are as follows:

Rigid enforcement of all prohibition measures, better highways, basing of the right of suffrage on intelligence, and laws on capital and labor on the golden rule; representation of minority parties in all legislative bodies; free speech, free press, a free Bible; one days rest in seven.

House Unable To Override Wilson's Peace Bill Veto

WASHINGTON, May 28—An effort to override President Wilson's veto of the Republican peace resolution failed today in the house. The vote was 219 in favor of overriding the veto to 152 against or 39 less than the required two-thirds majority.

Two Republicans, Representative Kelly of Michigan and Fuller of Massachusetts voted to sustain the president's veto while 17 Democrats joined the Republican majority in an effort to override it.

This was two less than the number of Democrats voting for the peace resolution when it was passed by the house. Among the Democrats voting to override the veto were Representatives Ashbrook and Sherwood, Ohio.

TALK WITH MARS IMPOSSIBLE NOW, SAYS SCIENTIST

Prof. Henry Meier.

Prof. Henry Meier of Centre College, Kentucky, a scientist whose works are widely known, recently delivered a paper before the American Academy of Science, Kentucky branch, in which he asserted that there are many things to be overcome before the inhabitants of the earth can communicate with Mars, provided there is anyone on Mars to be communicated with. He stated that atmospheric and economic conditions on Mars are such that man, constituted as he is, could not exist there; that even if Mars has inhabitants who might wish to signal the earth the almost unbridgeable space between the two planets would prove a tremendous obstacle; that wireless communication is impossible, because radiations from the sun would destroy electric energy; that, if all these obstacles were overcome, there could be no trade of ideas, because there is no way for interchange of thought.

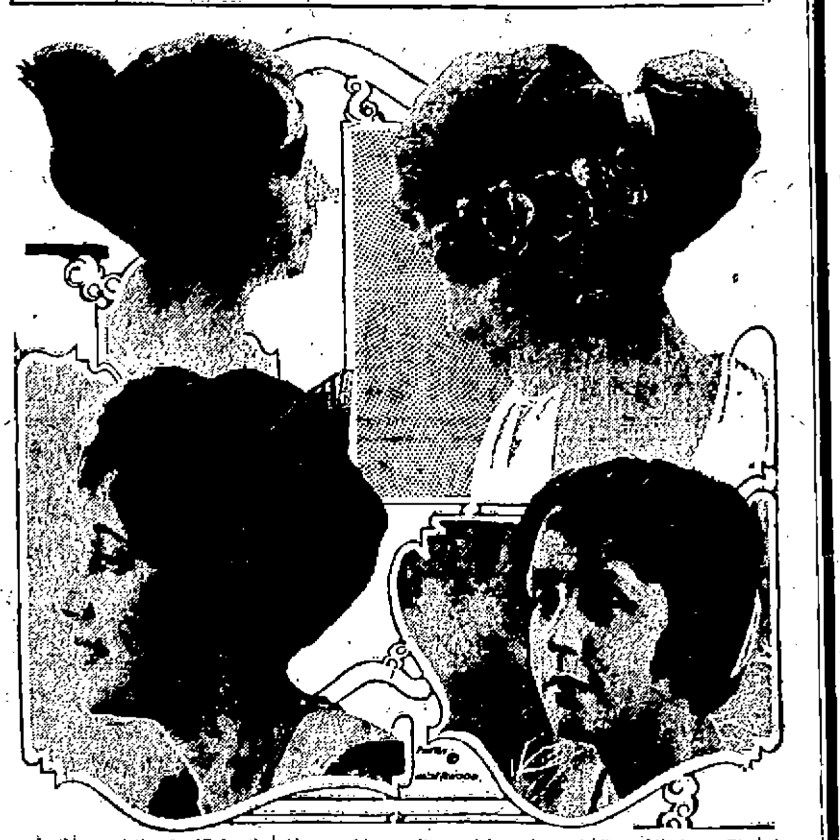
PLEASING NEW COIFFURES WORN AT HOME AND ABROAD



In this quartette of coiffures the two above are French and the two below are American. All are rather simple except the one at the right above, which is elaborate because of the garland of flowers which encircles the head. This is a rather pretty style, however, and is very youthful. Indeed, it would be very poor taste on an elderly matron. The other French hairdress is very simple, being merely parted on the side, waved in even lines and drawn back into a soft knot directly at the back of the head. A high comb and fancy pin may be worn with this mode.

Conspicuous among the novelties of the season are the sets consisting of comb, earrings and necklace as shown at the lower left. The fan comb here is just the ornament for this style of hairdress. It is a piquant little touch to the soft graceful lines of the hair. The hair is slightly waved, fluffed about the head and face, and all turned in under in the back with no knot or puffs in evidence. The coiffure at the lower right is very typical of the young American woman. The hair is marcelled and drawn back loosely into a knot low on the back of the head. A jeweled comb is worn in this coiffure especially for evening or formal occasions.

Opportunity Gone.

While talking to a caller one day I was annoyed by the interruption of my four-year-old daughter who was trying to tell something exciting. I reminded her that it was impolite to interrupt me and went on with my story. When I had finished I turned to her, saying: "Now, Louise, what did you want to tell me?" She answered disconsolately: "I've lost my say now."—Exchange.

The Early Balkan Settlers.

The first barbarians to settle permanently in the Balkan peninsula were the Bulgars, a Finnish people, whose home was the middle Volga districts. Mustard Will Case On Trial

The suit of Spicer M. Mustard and others against Charles O. Mustard and others, contesting the will of Madison Mustard, late Otway farmer, has been reassigned for trial in Common Pleas court for Wednesday, June 9.

At the former trial held on Feb. 10 last, the jury sustained the will but error was prosecuted to the Court of Appeals and that tribunal recently reversed the verdict and remanded the case for rehearing. Attorneys Miller and Searl and Thos. K. Funk for the contestants and Attorneys A. Z. Blair and B. F. Kimble for the proponents of the will. Possession of a valuable farm in Brush Creek township is involved in the suit.

Consequently the petit jury will not be required to come back until Thursday, June 3, when the case of James Nick and others against Oscar Boyer is assigned to be heard. The plaintiffs sued on a claim for $500 damages for surrendering a lease on a building on Chillicothe street owned by the defendant. Attorney George S. Keeping Warm in Finland.

In many ways the Finns are a very queer people. It is during the terrible cold months that the Finns revel in the mighty ovens that fill one corner of every kitchen and often loom up large and vastly impressive in the other rooms of a Finn home as well. The tops of these monster stoves are perfectly flat, and steps lead up on one side. When the weather becomes bitterly cold and bleak, the entire Finnish family will take quilts and pillows and, mounting to the top of the big heater, spread down their bedding and sleep very comfortably and contentedly on the hard hot bricks until morning.—Nevia C. Winter, in Christian Herald.

Chinese Made First Bread?

It is said that the Chinese were the first bread makers, and they made bread from wheat and rice as early as 1998 B. C. Probably the first bread made from yeast was baked in England in about 1634. Aerated bread, which rises from carbonic acid gas injected into the dough, became somewhat common in 1857, but practically all bread, bakery-made or home-made, owes its leavening to yeast or baking powder.

How did Jack Dempsey win the heavyweight championship of the world from the giant Jess Willard.

What was the blow that spelled doom for Willard and the pinnacle of fistic success for Dempsey?

Was Willard in proper condition? What is Dempsey's style? These and all other questions and matters of discussion about the great battle between Dempsey and Willard at Toledo are answered in the official motion pictures of the fight made in five full reels and declared to be better than any ringside seat, which will be shown at the Sun theatre four days starting Wednesday June 2. There will be five shows each day starting at 2:30, 3:45, 5:30, 7:15, and 9 o'clock.

Making Effort To Strike Oil On The Boulevard

W. C. Howell of Woodsfield, O., is here to make another effort to strike oil on property near the Boulevard just north of the city. Three test wells were put down on the Suter and Dorman properties several years ago.

Mr. Howell says he is convinced that oil will be struck there and has a force of men looking after the preliminary arrangements to sinking the wells to a greater depth.

"We have found sufficient oil to encourage us to go ahead," Mr. Howell said last night. "We may strike it in paying quantities and we may not. That is the risk we take. I really believe we will find it in paying quantities."

President Orders Wreath Be Placed On Statue Of Doughboy In France

PARIS, May 27.—President Wilson has ordered a Memorial Day wreath of flowers to be laid upon the statue, "The American Doughboy," in Suresnes cemetery and Ambassador Hughes C. Wallace will deposit it there on Sunday.

Instructions were received today from Mr. Wilson by his favorite flower vender, when he was in Paris, to get up a floral tribute to American dead. The merchant called at the American embassy this afternoon and was informed the order was all right and had come from the White House in Washington. He returned to his store to begin work on the presidential wreath.

The ceremony at Picpus cemetery, where lies the body of Lafayette, will appeal especially to the French people. Colonel Drake of the Memorial Day committee will preside and will make a short address to which Marquis Chambrun, grandson of Lafayette will reply.

The following message from Major General James G. Harbord, who commanded the second division in the battle of Belleau Wood, will be read on that field:

"Your comrades, the American Legion at home, confide to you the duty of honoring our dead who sleep in the soil of France. Dead on the field of honor, they yet live in the hearts of those for whom they died and millions of their countrymen enshrine their memory on May 30."

A memorial ode to American volunteers fallen for France, written by Alan Seeger, a member of the French foreign legion, who was killed in September, 1916, will be read in all American cemeteries, where members of the American Legion participate. It was to have been read by the author before the statues of Lafayette and Washington in this city, on May 30, 1917, but Seeger met his death in the midst of the French offensive of the Somme, at Belloy-en-Santerre, soon after penning the lines.

George Courteline and Louis Marsolleau, widely known French poets, told the Associated Press this afternoon, that a special wreath of flowers inscribed "from the poets of France" would be placed upon Seeger's grave on Memorial Day.

Lieutenant Colonel Frank Parker, who is scheduled to make an address at the Poissy cemetery, was asked today for an outline of his speech.

"Speech?" he replied. "I am not going to make a speech on Memorial Day. I am going to talk to those boys of mine who are lying up there just as I talked to them when they were living."

Major General John O'Ryan, who is now in London, will speak at Bony, where many of the soldiers of the 27th division fell. Rear Admiral Harry McL. P. Huse will be the principal speaker at Belleau Wood. A touching tribute is planned by the Union of Sporting Federations of France, of which Gaston Vidal is president. It has decided to place a special wreath upon the grave of John Overton, Yale athlete and champion mile runner, who was killed during the early days of the great allied offensive. Guillemot, the French champion mile runner, has been chosen to deposit the flowers upon Overton's grave.

In the absence of Andre Lefevre, minister of war, Premier Millerand has sent instructions to all the 25 army corps of France as follows:

"The French army will participate in the ceremonies held in principal cemeteries where lie American soldiers, especially Belleau Wood, St. Mihiel and Chaumont."

Gaston Vidal, president of the Union Sporting Federations has issued a circular to all sporting federations in France, saying:

"May 30th is a day of mourning in America, but it is also a day upon which sporting events assume a prominent place. Let us mourn the American dead, but in the final elimination contests which will choose athletes for participation in the Antwerp Olympic, let us do our best. Hats off to the American dead; let us dig our spikes in the track and beat the American living."

Some Shade In All Lives.

Persons who foolishly conclude that life is all sunshine and roses will when they least expect it, be rudely awakened from this pleasant dream. Each one of us has a certain work to do, certain cares and responsibilities to contend with, and if we think that the Fates are going to spare us from anything that savors of trial or anxiety a gigantic surprise is in store for us.

Brilliant Flashlight.

An excellent flash powder which produces a light of dazzling brilliancy, may be made by mixing equal quantities of magnesium dust and powdered chlorate of potash. Place the mixture on a piece of asbestos paper, and ignite it with a long wax taper. In a darkened room the suddenness and extreme brilliancy of the flash will dazzle everyone and produce a startling effect.—Popular Science Monthly.

Electric Ovens.

Electric heat finds its widest use in ovens, which have proved specially valuable in the automobile industry for baking the japan on car bodies. By this means japan is baked on 3,000 bodies every day. Other large users of such ovens are telephone and typewriter factories, foundries, makers of iron frames for beds and cots and manufacturers of chemicals. Electric devices of the sort are employed for baking effervescent salts, and for drying a large variety of products requiring well-regulated heat and clean air in the oven itself.

Onyx Gloves Silk Hose Special $5

Other Good Values In Silk Stockings

Maintaining our accepted leadership in silk hosiery is easy with such values as we offer here from one week to another. Every offering in silk stockings has long since been given the acid test by a particular clientele who demand perfect fitting and good looking silk stockings no less than they do good wearing qualities. Silk stockings, regardless of the quality, are not admired unless the fit around the ankle is perfect. There is but one kind of hose that will answer perfectly and that is a full fashioned. Merely a seam or a mock seam up the back wont do. They must be full fashioned.

We have the following in full fashioned silk stockings, all accepted and accredited values and famed for fit.

ONYX GLOVE SILK STOCKINGS, silk all the way up, full fashioned, a strictly high grade luxurious stocking, in black or dark brown, special at $5.

KITTY BESS SILK STOCKINGS, sold in Portsmouth for ten years exclusively at Andersons', the most serviceable silk hose we've ever sold, strictly full fashioned, in black, white or Russian Calf at $4.

ELITE SILK STOCKINGS, sold exclusively at Andersons', full fashioned, in black or white, special at $3.

CADET SILK STOCKINGS, another exclusive brand of hose with Andersons', sold here for fifteen years. Very high grade and of course full fashioned, black or white, at $3.50.

AFRICAN BROWN SILK STOCKINGS, all silk, very high grade at $5.

CLOCKED SILK STOCKINGS, white with hand embroidered darts in black at $5. Black with white darts special at $4. Black with beautiful black embroidery (Onyx brand) all entirely full fashioned at $5.

SUSETTE SILK SOCKS. These are new and are selling. It seems to be popular for many women during the summer months to roll their stockings down below the knees for comfort. This custom has brought out the silk socks which come just below the knees. They are practical and popular and we are selling them in black, brown and white at $2.

PHOENIX SILK STOCKINGS in black, white or brown, in the full fashioned style, excellent qualities at $2.60 and $3.50. Two styles with seams up the back (not full fashioned) at $1.60 and $2.15.

How About That Hoover?

Have you your Hoover yet? Remember that there is but one BEST electric cleaner, and watch your step when you go to buy a brand that you never heard tell of before. Better buy a Hoover than to wish you had in three or four years when some pretty machine with a nice name and which you have paid nearly as much for as you would a Hoover, goes ker-flooey and has to go on the scrap heap. Buy a Hoover now and be fixed for electric sweepers for a life time. Let somebody else do the experimenting with all these new makes, and in the meantime get a Hoover for service.

Graduation Gift Suggestions.

Authentic Bronte Relic.

An interesting relic of Charlotte Bronte, the novelist, has been presented to the museum at Haworth, England. It is a traveling trunk used by Charlotte Bronte. Inside is a label giving the maker's name and address in Brussels, and there is little doubt the trunk accompanied Charlotte on her journeys between Monsieur Heger's Pensionnat in the Rue d'Isabelle in that city, and her home at the Haworth rectory.

Red Heads Have the Advantage.

Many physicians of note are responsible for the assertion that the red-headed are more resistant to disease than less fiery-haired persons, and Sir Arbuthnot Lane expresses the view that "a disease becomes less virulent in type when it gains entrance into the body of a red-head than when it attacks a person with hair of a more modest color."

Greatest Cut-Price Sale In Portsmouth's History

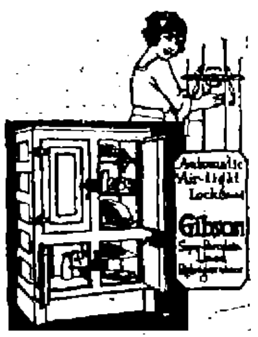
Starts Early Saturday Morning, May 29

And will last for a limited time only, so don't delay.

The Reason For This Sale Is This:

THE GIBSON REFRIGERATOR
Snowy White One-Piece Seamless Porcelain Lining

Early last year the Lewis Furniture Company contracted for fifteen car loads of refrigerators of the famous Gibson make at the old time prices. Three of these car loads were ordered shipped to the Portsmouth store. But owing to freight tie up and congestions they were delayed many weeks. The three car loads came in on us rather unexpectedly Thursday—three car loads, mark you—and we have no adequate place to store so many, so we decided to sell them at the most startling reductions — to offer them to you at prices far below what we could buy them for today. We are away over-stocked—far too many refrigerators and icers — and we must move them quickly.



GIBSON
Keeps foods fresh and Sweet

THINK OF THIS—A top icer, solid oak 25 pound capacity, worth $16.50 and sold the world over at these figures, reduced to $9.95

HERE'S ANOTHER RARE BARGAIN—SIDE ICER, SOLID OAK, porcelain lined, one of the best of the famous Gibson family. Sold the world over for $37.50, reduced to $19.95

We have many, many sizes of refrigerators, with and without water coolers, but have simply quoted prices on two to give you an idea of the tremendous price reductions thereon. Bear in mind the fact that every refrigerator or ice box in the store is going on the sale rack and you can make your selection from the many and get yours at the same proportionate reduction as quoted on the two mentioned above.

This Is A Real Sale Of Real Refrigerators

Come in and secure yours early Saturday, for we know this sale will get results — it is almost unparalled in the history of Portsmouth—but we must get rid of the refrigerators and you profit thereby.

Our Household Club Plan enables you to use your furniture while paying for it. Ask our salesmen—they will be glad to explain.

KENTUCKY WOMAN IS WELL FIRST TIME IN TWELVE LONG YEARS

Mrs. Hamacher Says It Was A Happy Day For Her When She Began Taking Tanlac.

IS NOW ENJOYING SPLENDID HEALTH

Was So Weak She Could Hardly Walk And Had Begun To Think There Was No Hope For Her.

"For the past twelve years I didn't know what a well day was but since taking Tanlac I have completely regained my health and strength, said Mrs. Elizabeth Hamacher of 1622 Lydle Street, Louisville, Ky., recently.

"I had suffered so long it looked like there was no hope for me and I thought I would have to bear my troubles the rest of my days. My stomach was so badly disordered that I ate very little of anything and nothing tasted good to me. I suffered awfully from gas on my stomach and sometimes my heart palpitated so bad it frightened me. Spells of dizziness often came on me and I had to catch hold of something or sit down to keep from falling. My sleep was always restless and disturbed and every morning I got up with a tired, worn-out feeling. I was in a badly run-down condition and at times was so weak I could hardly walk and I realized I couldn't hold out much longer.

"My son suggested that I try Tanlac and it was a happy day for me when I started taking it for I began improving right away. It has been just a little over a month since I first started on Tanlac but already I am enjoying splendid health and have unusual strength and energy for a person of my age. I enjoy three good meals every day and I never have a touch of indigestion. My heart-action is normal and regular, and I am entirely free from dizziness, I sleep like a child and get up every morning ready to attend to my house-work. I am glad to have my statement published for I feel I am doing a good deed every time I tell someone about Tanlac." Tanlac is sold in Portsmouth, by the Fisher and Streich Pharmacy and the leading druggists in every town.

The committee in charge of Decoration Day exercises want it known that automobiles will be furnished to transport veterans and members of their families who are not physically able to attend and march in the parade.

Quite a number of vehicles have been secured but others are needed, and the committee would be glad to have automobile owners who can spare a machine with driver to call either of the members at an early a date as possible.

You Feel That Way If Your Blood Is Starved for Red Cells

Pepto-Mangan Makes Red Blood

Overcomes That Languid Feeling That Cheats You Out of Work And Fun

You say, "I wish I could go, but I don't feel able." Your friends say, "Are you ill?"

You are not exactly sick, you just feel unable to approach work or play in the old, vigorous spirit.

The high speed at which Americans live sometimes taxes their strength. The blood is weak, lacking in red cells. When this condition exists, Gude's Pepto-Mangan taken three times a day shows quick benefits. Pepto-Mangan is known to physicians as The Red Blood Builder. It increases the supply of rich, healthy blood and in the absence of deep-seated disease this means health and strength for men, or women or children.

Pepto-Mangan is put up in both liquid and tablet form. Both forms are exactly alike in medical qualities. When you order Pepto-Mangan, be sure to ask the druggist for "Gude's." And look for the name "Gude's" on the package. If "Gude's" is not there, it is not Pepto-Mangan.—Advt.

MISS DOLLY WISE

She is here to answer any and all questions concerning love, matrimony, troubles, woes, etiquette, etc. Inquiries should be addressed to Miss Dolly Wise, care The Daily Times, Portsmouth, Ohio.

Dear Dolly—As I want to wear my uniform in the Decoration Day parade I would like to know if I should remove the insignia from the sleeve.
SAMMIE.

You need not remove it.

Dear Dolly—Please print this in your column: Bertha, why did you send me such an awful letter. I never said anything about you, and never meant you at all. It was only a joke about myself. Can't you understand a joke. Daddy still loves you and baby. Do you remember our baby and how you love daddy and baby. But you have broken my heart. If you had only told me the truth about yourself, things would have been different.'
DADDY.

Doubtless "Bertha" will understand this communication which seems most mysterious.

Miss Dolly Wise—Could you please tell me what to put on a rose bush that has green bugs on it, also mildew forms on the buds and leaves.
MRS. . R.

There are a number of insects that trouble the rose and they are so destructive in some localities that the culture of the rose is almost abandoned. The rose slug is the most common of these, and feeds upon the leaves just as the buds begin to develop. They are mostly found on the under side of the leaf, and their appearance is known by the leaves appearing brown, as if scorched or burned. It is said that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, and if this is so, it would be economy to syringe the plants thoroughly with whale-oil soap suds, made by using a half pound of soap to four gallons of water, before the insects appear. If roses are neglected until the slugs are numerous dust the foliage effectually in the morning while the dew is on, with white hellibore. Another effective remedy is to dust the bushes with equal parts of sulphur and tobacco dust. The water in which tobacco stems are soaked is also good. If the weather be dry they should be watered two or three times a week to prevent mildew.

Dear Dolly—Is there an after war society for women who done their duty during the war. They can join the American Legion but I think they ought to be recognized by some one, don't you. RED CROSS WORKER.

There is an organization called the American Womens Legion composed of mothers, wives, sisters and daughters of the veterans of the World War. The organization is asking a national charter from Congress. The legion plans a membership much in advance of the American Legion as the potential membership, including the wives, mothers, sisters and daughters of service men, is approximately 20,000,000. An official magazine is to be started to be known as "The Awl" —the magazine with a Punch. The legion chapters are to be living memorials to boys who gave their lives in the war. Chapters may be organized by any ten women eligible for membership. Why not start a chapter here.

Miss Dollie Wise—I am coming to you with my troubles to see if I can get some help. I am a married woman and have to work. I have 4 children to raise and I only make $15 or $16 per week and I can not meet my expenses. My husband ran away some time ago and left me and the children and I am going to have to get homes for them and I would like to get you to find good homes for me. I have a girl 15 years, boy 9 years, girl 7 years and I would like to keep my baby boy if I can. He is 4 years old. I want to get homes where they will be well raised and can go to school and church. I have kept them so far but I am going to have to break up. I have no help. I will surely be glad for some help. I will give you my name and address and if any one asks for it give it to them. MRS. A.

Free Formula For Freckles

If you freckle easily, this is the season to prevent their appearance or remove these unsightly defects. Here is a good old fashioned formula which does the work.

Derwillo, 1 oz.
Oatmeal, 2 tablespoonfuls.
Use as directed in every package of derwillo.

This formula can be used freely, as it is absolutely harmless and will not stimulate or produce a growth of hair. Mix it at home then you know you have the genuine article. Do not accept a substitute as there is nothing better, just as good or just like it. Try it today and you will be delightfully surprised. Your freckles will disappear as if by magic. The first application will astonish you. This splendid formula not only prevents and removes freckles, but beautifies as well and brings to any skin that rosy, white, velvety softness so much desired by every one. No other freckle remedy does this. It is also splendid for dark, sallow skin, roughness, pimples, blackheads, wrinkles, chapped skin, and puts the bloom of youth on your cheeks which will cause admiration everywhere. You will look many years younger and have a skin everyone "just loves to touch."

NOTE—When asked about derwillo one of our leading druggists said: "Derwillo is surely a wonderful aid in removing freckles. It is away ahead of anything we have ever sold before, and we are authorized to refund the money to every dissatisfied purchaser. We would not permit the use of our name unless the article possessed unusual merit. It is sold in this city under a positive money refund guarantee by all department stores and druggists, including Flood & Blake and Fisher & Streich.

C. OF C. ROYALLY ENTERTAINED IN WHEELERSBURG

Progressive Citizens Of That Village Open Hospitality Door Wide; Fine Talks Are Made

By far the greatest success of all Chamber of Commerce forum meetings was the one held Thursday evening, when Wheelersburg entertained 275 members of the Portsmouth Chamber of Commerce, the big crowd showing clearly that the interest of the Portsmouth and Wheelersburg residents are one and the same. All who attended were greatly surprised at the attendance and enthusiasm displayed. There were close to 275 paid plates and 315 served, the 315 including the Wheelersburg citizens present. The program proved to be one of the best, and this forum meeting will be one long-to-be remembered by all who had some part in it.

Splendid talks were made by County School Superintendent E. O. McCowen, C. E. Dowling, Otto Zoellner and Manager J. B. Wiles. Harold Walker presided at the piano, while Fred Klingman rendered two vocal selections. At the close of the program Rev. W. A. Thomas' Boy Scouts gave a short program, rendering two comical selections "Topsy Turvey" and "Johnny Smoker."

The local members going to the village formed a real automobile parade. The machines lined up to receive members reached from John street to Chillicothe street, on Gallia. The Horchow machine bearing the banner, "Hello, Wheelersburg," had the lead. In this machine were Samuel Horchow, Joseph Horchow and Manager J. B. Wiles and daughter.

The machines kept their automobile horns sounding along the route, and the residents of Wheelersburg easily knew when they arrived. Just as the machines entered Wheelersburg they were met by the Boy Scouts, who escorted the delegation to the high school, at the eastern end of the village. At the entrance to the school the Scouts stood in open file and at salute while the C. of C. members passed between them.

The crowd soon filled the high school auditorium, where the tables were set. The overflow was taken care of in one of the smaller class rooms, every desk and seat being occupied.

The menu served by the Ladies' Aid Society of the Wheelersburg M. E. church proved very appetizing. A second call had to be sent out for some things on the menu, as a crowd of only 250 was expected.

The menu included roast chicken, sweet potatoes, gravy, dressing, baked beans, pickles, bread, cottage cheese, coffee and pie.

Prof. E. O. McCowen was chairman of the meeting and made the address of welcome. In his remarks he told how glad the people of Wheelersburg were to have the C. of C. as their guests and invited the organization to return soon for another rousing meeting. The speaker also spoke of Wheelersburg as the future East Portsmouth, saying how Pine Creek would prove an ideal spot for a large steel plant, and how the N. & W. shops should be located near the village.

C. E. Dowling responded to the welcoming remarks saying that the C. of C. was glad of the opportunity to be entertained at the picturesque village with so many hospitable residents and members of the C. of C. Before closing his remarks Mr. Dowling spoke of the friendly relationship existing between Portsmouth and Wheelersburg and urged that everything be done to keep this feeling growing.

Mr. Zoellner
Made Talk

Otto Zoellner of Wheelersburg was the next speaker, taking for his subject "Good Roads." On this subject he spoke of the work of the C. of C. in helping get good roads for that community and backed up his plea for better or permanent roads by giving statistics showing how many hundreds of gallons of milk were transported over a certain road near the village each year, and how much more would be transported if the road was improved.

He also told of how the farmer should unite himself with the C. of C. as the interests of the city man and farmer are mutual. Before closing, Mr. Zoellner added a few words urging the Good Roads committee of the C. of C. to do all they could for better roads in Wheelersburg community, as permanent improved roads would sooner or later be paved streets of East Portsmouth. Mr. Zoellner pictured the paved Dogwood Ridge road as one of the future paved thoroughfares of the eastern part of the city of Portsmouth.

Explains Working
Of Chamber of Commerce

The last speaker was Manager J. B. Wiles, who took for his theme, "Why A Chamber of Commerce." In part Mr. Wiles said: "Community leadership, as expressed by the modern C. of C., makes possible the planning and executing of those activities vitally necessary to the growth and prosperity of any city. Carefully planned, well studied action, together with the spirit of unselfishness, whichever lies nearest the heart of the true American citizen, makes possible the achievement of industrial and civic accomplishments which go to make up a great city.

The phenomenal growth of the C. of C. movement throughout the United States, in fact all over the world, indicates the need that is felt by the constructive business men of every locality for a medium through which they may express their ideas for community betterment.

'The first function of a C. & C. is to teach the public to think,' says Lucius Wilson, the dean of the movement. Therefore, in my community, where constructive thinking men and women are brought together, all actuated by the purpose of helping make their city a better place in which to live and in which to transact business, and the results of their constructive thinking are translated into constructive action, nothing but good can result, the critics notwithstanding.

"Community leadership, as expressed by the C. of C., is a collective, rather than an individual leadership. A man's character is the aggregate of his thinking, and a city's character is the aggregate of the team thinking of its citizens. Therefore the duty of a C. of C. is to train men and women in any community to think in terms of progress, and to so act that progress will result from team thinking. Thought must precede action, or action will be midirected.

Civic idealism, properly fostered and carried into effect results in civic progress. This progress is visible in many cities, both large and small, in parks, recreation centers, better sanitary conditions, paved streets, industrial expansion, up-to-date streets, lighting, more adequate housing facilities and the countless other benefits enjoyed by those localities where a live, active commercial organization holds sway.

What is a C. of C? A C. of C. is an organization composed of the men and women of any community, who have banded themselves together for the unselfish purpose of working for the advancement of the citizens-at-large. It is an avenue for the correlating of ideas and the development of these ideas, to the end that some practical solution to the various problems confronting any community may be found. It provides the machinery whereby these ideas can be worked into concrete form, and the visualization of these ideas can be obtained.

"Everyone is eligible to membership in a C. of C., as the organization does not, as often stated, represent the monied interests in the community. If the Chamber is founded upon truly democratic principles, which should underly bodies of this character, there will be absolutely no distinction between capital and labor, rich and poor, or brains and brawn. A successful C. of C. is sold to its membership on the basis of service. Its accomplishments are in a direct ratio to the service rendered by its members and workers form the real backbone of the organization. Do not do your criticising on the outside, but work from the inside out. Constructive criticism is always beneficial, but destructive condemnation never gets us anywhere.

Has Praise For Various Committees

Mr. Wiles then told of the different committees at work on important projects and how they are progressing. In closing Mr. Wiles said: "The successful accomplishments of hundreds of Chambers of Commerce, both large and small, are sufficient indication of their need and permanence in any wide-awake community, and the more loyal the support given the organization by the citizenship at large, the more good will be accomplished. When the C. of C. has assumed its rightful place in any locality, where its need is felt, and when, through the loyal co-operation of its membership, great accomplishments are achieved, then the citizens of those communities can rightfully say, in the language of the scripture, "I am a citizen of no mean ability."

The meeting came to a close about nine o'clock, with the Boy Scouts giving their short program, which sent the crowd away in the best of humor. Rev. Thomas is doing good work with his troop of Scouts in the village.

Moslems Flee; Christians Are Forced To Stay

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 28—(By The Associated Press)—Moslem leaders in the Vilayet of Adrianople, in European Turkey, are sending their families to this city in anticipation of fighting when the Greeks attempt to occupy Thrace. Christians, however, are not permitted to leave their homes in that region. Just before the conclusion of the recent Turkish congress in Adrianople, the presiding officer declared an agreement to defend Thrace had been reached between the Turks and Bulgarians.

A mass meeting was held at Rodosto, sixty miles northeast of Gallipoli on May 22, the keynote of addresses made there being:

"We shall reduce Thrace to ashes before leaving it to the Greeks," it is said. Many of the speakers and prominent men in attendance took the oath upon the koran to defend Thrace

Armenians Crush The Red Revolution

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 25.—(By The Associated Press)—Armenians have crushed the Bolshevik uprising against their government in Erivan, and a loyal Armenian army now is in control of Alexandropol, according to a message received from the Armenian capital by M. Pekzatian, Armenian diplomatic representative at Tiflis. It is reported the people of Alexandropol received with acclaim the Armenian troops, rejoicing at being freed from the Bolsheviki who had dominated the railways.

General Khachadorian, an Armenian commander, who recently revolted and who was in charge of an armored train which made Bolshevik control of Alexandropol possible, was killed during the fighting before that city and his associates fled when the loyal troops captured the train.

Keeping Fit.

Man in this world is like a traveler who is always walking toward a colder region, and who is, therefore, obliged to be more active as he goes farther north. The great malady of the soul is cold, and in order to counteract this formidable illness he must keep up the activity of his mind not only by work but by contact with his fellow men and with the world.—De Toqueville.

Best of 22

The Eldorado Stage Co. of Los Angeles tested 22 leading makes on 12-passenger Packard buses. Not a tire was found to match the Millers in that extreme service.

Some Costly Mistakes

Men are Making on Tires

Men who buy tires on a guess, or on claims, are making some costly mistakes.

Large tire users make tests and comparisons. And the results in late years are amazing.

Hudson Taxi Co. of Detroit, for instance, made a long test on Miller Cords. And the average was 15,000 miles.

Miller dealers get hundreds to compare Miller mileage with others. And they find an increased mileage of 50 per cent to 75 per cent.

Large truck users are comparing Miller Cords, passenger type, with all others. And they are coming in large numbers to Millers.

California stage lines are using Millers after million-mile tests with many rivals.

The Way to Know

At the Miller factory over 1,000 tires yearly are worn out in tests and comparisons.

They constantly prove that Miller is the best tire built.

In extreme rear-wheel tests they require an average of 15,000 miles on Cords.

They prove that the new Miller tread outwears the best of others by 25 per cent.

Such tires should be tested by every owner of a car. See what they give you. Compare with any tire on opposite rear wheels.

Miller experts, in late years, have doubled average tire mileage. Old-times figures do not apply today.

You will fix new requirements for your tires when you try a Miller. Do it now.

Official Tattooing.

In some countries tattooing is adopted for several purposes. For example, in Samoa, when a woman is married several tattoo marks are placed on her, and both in Fiji and Samoa the birth of each child is registered in this way on the mother's hand.

Public Health Notes

Anyone looking at the pin map showing the present distribution of smallpox in Ohio would never imagine that over a century ago Edward Jenner had discovered a certain method of preventing the disease. Smallpox is altogether too common in Ohio. Energetic and intelligent attempts to prevent its spread will always succeed. The reasons for the continued prevalence of the disease are as follows:

1.—The mildness of the disease. Many persons do not call a physician, prefer the mild form of smallpox to vaccination, and many physicians, inexperienced in smallpox, fail to make proper diagnosis.

2.—The lack of vaccination. Only in a few of the larger cities is vaccination of school children compulsory.

3.—The failure to follow up all exposures to the disease. This must be done thoroughly if the spread of the disease is to be prevented.

In order to prevent smallpox the causes of its spread must be overcome. The mildness of the disease. One of the first lessons to teach the public is that smallpox need not be a severe disease. Even in the time of Jenner there were many mild cases, and only cases in which the eruption was confluent resulted in "pitting" or scarring. The second point which must be emphasized is that however mild may be the prevailing disease, the results in any given case cannot be prophesied, that a certain number of cases will result fatally, and that pregnant women are usually easy prey and nearly always die.

The harmlessness of vaccination must also be impressed upon the public. At one time vaccination not infrequently resulted in an infection of the arm. Practically no accidents or complications have resulted from vaccination since the United States Public Health Service was given authority to license all establishments manufacturing vaccine for interstate use. Vaccine must now be prepared under the most stringent rules and regulations, and the final product must be safe. If vaccinations are properly performed the patients will suffer no harm. One of the objectionable methods of vaccination is the "cross-hatching" which predisposes to infection. Incision or inoculation are preferable.

All cases of suspicious eruption should be reported and a modified quarantine will be imposed on all cases of Chickenpox. There is no such disease as "Cuban Itch" or "Nigger Itch," and any case reported as having an eruption due to rubber should be investigated.

Finally, the prevention of smallpox may be summed up as consisting in

1.—The location of all cases, which entails the investigation of all suspicious eruptions.

2.—The isolation of all cases.

3.—The vaccination or quarantine of every exposed person.

4—General vaccination of school children and the public generally.

SEDAN HITS PARKED CAR, DRIVER IS INJURED, POLICE CONFISCATE WHISKEY, TWO MEN HELD

A large crowd gathered quickly Thursday night about 9:45 when a Ford sedan, driven by Evan Bartlett of New Boston ran into the Chevrolet touring car of Albert Brunner, which was parked along the south side of Gallia street in front of the W. G. Williams home, Gallia and Union streets.

Bartlett was driving, evidently at a good rate of speed, up Gallia street, according to the police, who also say he was in an intoxicated condition. Bartlett claims that bright lights blinding him caused him to loose control of the sedan and strike the Brunner car.

Lundy Vickers, a steel worker, also of New Boston, was in the car at the time of the accident. Flying glass from the windshield cut Vickers severely about the neck.

Immediately after the accident occurred, Vickers grabbed a Carnation canned milk carton containing two gallon jugs full of corn whiskey and fled down Union street, the police say. He ran to the home of a friend on Front street, and was there found shortly afterwards by the police, who summoned medical aid. Drs. Kiel and Gault answered, and took the injured man to the Hempstead hospital, where his wounds were dressed. The cuts were only skin deep, no blood vessels being severed. Blood, however, flew in all directions.

Bartlett, whose nose was broken, was attended by Dr. D. A. Berndt. He was taken to the police station, where he was locked up. He told officers that he knew nothing of the whiskey; that he did not know it was in the car; and that it did not belong to him. When arrested he was staggering drunk, the police say. He spent the night in the city prison.

The liquor, police say, is a poor grade of corn juice, probably 50 proof. The liquor, the blood-spattered milk carton, and a burlap sack which was wrapped around the jugs are held as evidence by the police.

The Brunner car was not badly damaged, the left back fender being mashed. The sedan, however, fared worse, the front axle being bent; the radiator was caved in; the windshield smashed; lights broken, and front fenders badly bent.

Chief Distel, Capt. Startzman and Officers Flowers and Shumate answered the call which was sent into police headquarters, going to the scene of the trouble in Fire Chief Leedom's machine and the police Ford.

Vickers was taken to the hospital in Leedom's machine. Dr. Berndt stated to the police that he saw Vickers running down Union street carrying something and that he called to him, asking if he was hurt. Vickers, he said, made no reply, but kept on running.

The two men will appear before Judge Horace Small on intoxication charges at 1 o'clock Friday afternoon. Bartlett will face a driving-while-intoxicated charge, and both may be held to answer to graver charges concerning the liquor, the police aver.

Not Much Change In Condition

Richard Coe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Coe of Glover street, who was injured when an auto truck struck him while he was riding a bicycle near Fifth and Lincoln streets over a week ago, remained in about the same condition Thursday night and Friday morning.

The lad's temperature Friday morning was somewhat higher than the previous day, and he remains in the unconscious condition in which he has been ever since the accident. Dr. S. S. Halderman, however, stated that the lad's condition showed slight improvement Friday morning.

A cousin of Mr. Coe, Miss [illegible] Coe, of Cincinnati, a trained nurse, has arrived in the city and is assisting in the care of the injured lad.

Accused of Abandoning Children

Mary Taylor, wife of Chester Taylor, proprietor of a soft drink establishment on Offnere street, was taken into custody and locked up at the city jail Thursday night for alleged abandoning her four small children.

The woman left home several days ago for the association of other men, according to the husband, who filed the complaint.

One Parental Duty.

It is almost a crime for parents to rear children to manhood or woman- hood without teaching them, or seeing that they are taught, how to swim. Everybody should know how to swim, for one never can tell when or under what circumstances ability to take care of oneself in the water may spell the difference between life and death.—Atlanta Constitution.

"Blue Nose."

Blue Nose is a popular name for a native of Nova Scotia. Haliburton, in "Sam Slick," gives the following account of its origin: "'Pray, sir,' said one of my fellow passengers, 'can you tell me why the Nova Scotians are called Blue Noses?' 'It is the name of a potato,' said I, 'which they produce in the greatest perfection, and boast to be the best in the world. The Americans have in consequence given them the nickname 'Blue Noses.'"

Every Woman

Be she working in factory, shop, office or at home, is often a sufferer from pains here or there, from worry, despondency, and frequently suffers from backache. Very often the trouble is in the organs essentially feminine. Worry, sleepless nights, headaches, pains, disorders, irregularities and weaknesses of a distinctly feminine character in a short time bring the dull eye, the "crow's feet," the haggard look, drooping shoulders and the faltering step. To retain the appearance of youth, a woman must retain health. Instead of lotions, powders and paints ask your druggist for Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This is the woman's temperance tonic and nervine which has had the approval of thousands of women for nearly fifty years. It comes in liquid or tablet form, or send ten one-cent stamps to the Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., for trial package of the tablets. The "Favorite Prescription" is made without alcohol, and will dispel the pains and the weaknesses common to most women in different periods of life.

SANDUSKY, OHIO.—"Doctor Pierce's medicines have been used in my home for years, and they have always given perfect satisfaction. Before I learned of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription I was ailing all the time and since I began taking it I have had splendid health. During the time I was bringing up a family I was never without a bottle of 'Favorite Prescription' in the house to take when feeling ill. It is the best medicine I have ever taken to build up a run-down system and to give new strength to one who is weak. Women who suffer will find 'Favorite Prescription' a great help."—MRS. J. W. BAILEY, No. 832 Depot Street.

Just Arrived, New J. T. Cousins Pumps And Oxfords

The good news of the arrival of J. T. Cousins Shoes will be well appreciated by the wearers of Cousins Shoes. It may be that you are in need of a pair to dress up in over the holidays, or it may be you are in need of a pair for every day wear. It matters not what your wants may be, with these new styles and lasts we feel sure that we have your proper want.

Model 891 Perfectly Plain yet plainly perfect is this slender Pump. This all purpose flat bow pump never goes out of fashion, but it develops from year to year in beauty line and perfection of fit. This new model has a low, invisible tongue which prevents pressure just below the instep. We take our special pleasure in supplying our patrons with this aristocratic shoe.

Model 895 The Minuet. This dainty shoe is one of those rare shoes that can be several shoes in one. It may be worn with wide ribbon bow, or ornamented with beaded or fancy buckle, or it can easily be worn with spats when occasion requires. The high tongue, graceful arch and moderately long vamp are characteristic of season's best shoe fashions.

Model 897 The Low Louis Heel. This type of shoe has gained rapidly in favor with women who want a smart dress pump but do not care to wear high heels. The illustration shows you the low heel feature is united with a very cleverly cut upper with the popular high tongue.

Model 870. For A Slender Foot this beautifully white modeled pump is designed especially for the women who have difficulty in keeping the usual model in correct position. The high tongue, cut in one piece holds it securely to the slenderest instep. Its very simplicity adds not a little beauty to the prettiest foot.

SCHOOL BOARD PLANS HIGHER WAGES FOR TEACHERS; NEW TIME DEFEATED

Definite action for an increase in the salaries of local teachers, commencing with the resumption of school next September, was taken at a meeting of the Board of Education in the clerk's office last night.

A motion introduced by Member Wm. Altsman, and seconded by Member Marvin Clark, carried unanimously to appeal to the voters at the August primaries for an additional tax levy. An additional levy of three mills will be asked for to meet the increased cost for school purposes.

Following is the motion, as made by Member Wm. Altsman: "I move that the teachers' contracts be presented to them after the appointments of teachers have been made by the superintendent and approved by the board, on the same basis of salary as they are now receiving; and that we prepare a resolution to be presented to the people for a vote at the August primaries, asking for an increase in levy which will provide a suitable advance in salary to the teachers, and if voted on favorably that new contracts be signed up by the teachers before they begin work in September; and that we pledge ourselves to do all within our power to see that this resolution will be passed."

Following the passage of the motion, another motion carried unanimously to instruct the clerk and city solicitor to bring in the necessary legislation which will be presented to the board of elections, petitioning for an additional three mill levy for five years to meet the increased expenses for school purposes.

The matter of whether or not the local schools will adopt new time was revived when Member Wm. Altsman stated that he was on a Chamber of Commerce committee to urge the adoption of new time locally.

On his motion to adopt new time in the local schools, commencing next Tuesday, members Clark and Altsman voted yes and members Roth and Jackson voted no. The latter two members took the stand that old time was favorable to the students, while the new time is "nothing more than a fad over which the people were fooling themselves." The motion was lost.

A motion carried to observe Memorial Day, Monday, with the dismissal of the schools for the day.

On motion the clerk was instructed to draw up future forms of contract for the employment of teachers to provide that teachers shall receive full pay for any absence not over ten days caused by personal disability during the school year.

The matter of selecting dates on which the ten monthly installments of wages shall be paid teachers was referred to the superintendent and clerk, to report at the next meeting.

The janitors' payroll was allowed, and a schedule of $912.50 was passed. On motion the contract and bond of the Walters Plumbing Co. for repairs was accepted.

The board will meet next Tuesday evening in the clerk's office at which time the tentative list of graduates from the high school will be presented for confirmation; and the list of appointments of teachers for the ensuing school year will be brought in for confirmation by Supt. Appel.

MANY PEOPLE HAVE EYE STRAIN

Who do not know it. In many cases the symptoms are so indefinite that it is a long time before they are charged up to strained eyes. Optometrists claim that eye strain is far more prevalent, and its results far more serious, than the public have any idea of. For that reason it should be suspected when a person complains of some vague and hard to account for physical ailment. An examination by our methods would likely clear the matter up in many cases.

NORMAN AND CURLEY ON TRIAL

Sheriff E. E. Rickey, Will I. Davis, former New Boston marshal and other local persons went to Cincinnati Friday to testify in the case of E. R. Norman, Ashland auto salesman and William Curley, Cincinnati hotel clerk on trial before Judge John W. Peck and a jury in the United States District court on charges of transporting and having in possession whiskey in violation of the Volstead Act.

The charges against the men resulted from their arrest by New Boston officers early on the morning of Jan. 17 last, with 37 gallons of liquor, stolen from the home of J. S. Stevens, Mt. Joy, in their possession. The whiskey was discovered in an automobile driven by Norman after the machine had stalled just east of the village.

Norman and Curley were recently sentenced to the penitentiary by Judge Thomas following their conviction of the crime of larceny in connection with the theft of the whiskey but the sentence was suspended to permit the prosecution of error to the Court of Appeals.

overwhelming sentiment in my state for him," he said. "I told him we were having a primary down there and that his name would go in whether he liked it or not, but that we would be in an absurd situation if we were voting for a man who would not take the nomination.

"He said he was not a candidate, would not turn his hand over to meet the nomination and didn't want his friends to take any action about it. He did, however, say that if the nomination was tendered him a man could not decline."

"Some of his friends thought they ought to take the bull by the horns and go ahead whether he wanted them or not. There was some sort of a dinner party up in New York about it and some fool went and told him about it."

"Who was there?" Chairman Kenyon asked.

"Well, Mr. Roper," Mr. McLean said, referring to the former collector of internal revenue, "and some others," the witness added that later "some of Mr. McAdoo's friends were pretty mad about it."

"Do you know anything about plans to use the liberty loan publicity campaign organization for McAdoo?" asked Chairman Kenyon.

"I do not."

"I want to apologize for being rough with you," Senator Reed put in. "I'm glad some man is letting the presidency seek him, not chasing it."

"If there ever was a rabbit Mr. McAdoo is it," returned Mr. McLean.

The witness said he had talked to B. M. Baruch.

"Both of us agreed that Mr. McAdoo would be a good man," he said. "My own idea was we ought to lay back and see what the Republicans did. Of course our delegation from North Carolina will support Senator Simmons, not even excepting Mr. McAdoo."

Louis J. Lang, a reporter of the New York American, identified himself as the writer of an article purporting to tell of $5,000,000 underwriting fund to back a campaign to bring about McAdoo's nomination at San Francisco. He refused to disclose the source of his information.

"A member of the Democratic national committee was with my informant when I was told the story," Mr. Lang said.

The committee did not press the point, but Chairman Kenyon announced that several members of the Democratic national committee had been subpoenaed to appear during the investigation.

Mr. Lang discussed a meeting of the Democratic national executive committee at Atlantic City last September. He said that plans were made to raise $10,000,000 for a Democratic national campaign. Thomas F. Thadbourne and B. M. Baruch were at Atlantic City at the time, he said.

Mr. Lang testified that he had been informed that a member of the national committee had stated that Frederick A. Wallis, a deputy police commissioner of New York, was representing Mr. Baruch in collecting finances for the McAdoo campaign and that the $10,000,000 financing as planned at Atlantic City contemplated Mr. McAdoo's nomination by the Democratic convention.

Members of the national committee," Lang said, had corroborated the story later.

FORMER U. S. AMBASSADOR TO MEXICO ADVOCATES NEW BUFFER STATE SOUTH OF THE RIO GRANDE

The division of Mexico at the twenty-second parallel by the creation, with force if necessary, of an independent Mexican republic, including the present states of Sonora, Chihuahua, Nuevo Leon and Tamaulipas and the territory of Lower California, is advocated by Henry Lane Wilson, former U. S. ambassador to Mexico. Mr. Wilson points out that northern Mexico has been "the breeding ground of all recent Mexican revolutions" which Mexico City has not been able to control successfully, and asserts the division of the country would insure permanent peace.

The Markets

NEW YORK STOCKS

NEW YORK, May 28—Leading issues extended recent gains at the opening of today's stock market. Reports that further gold imports are impending and favorable crop prospects were among the encouraging factors. Steels, equipments and oils were the outstanding features, but leather and food specialties also strengthened with rails, notably Reading, Atchison and New Haven. There were no indications of any unsettlement in the money market over the week.

An unusual variety of stocks participated in the further rise of the morning. Steels, equipments and oils continued to lead the way with shippings, motors, utilities, coppers and food specialties. Extreme gains of 2 to 4 points were made by Mexican petroleum, American car, Baskell and Barker, Stromberg, United fruit and Peoples gas. Union Pacific, Great Northern and New York Central were foremost among the stronger rails, the cheaper transportations also improving. Prices eased irregularly before noon, when trading became dull. Liberty bonds showed no material change but rates on London reacted slightly.

Business on the stock exchange today was light in anticipation of the holiday but leaders of the industrial and railway groups made additional advances. Sales approximated 500,000 shares.

The closing was strong.

Provisions were inactive. Owing to absence of demand, quotations averaged lower.

Charity.

How many things might be tolerated in peace and left to conscience, had we but charity, and were it not the chief stronghold of our hypocrisy to be ever judging one another.—John Milton.

Striving After Strength.

We think that we shall win truth by striving after strength. Instead of knowing that we shall gain strength just in the degree that we become true.—Phillips Brooks.

OBITUARY

Mrs Mary Jones

Last Thursday the spirit of Mrs Mary Jones took its flight and left its tenement of clay that it had inhabited for 80 years. Services fere held Saturday in the Christian church, of which she was an honored member, by her pastor Elder Stambaugh to a congregation of her friends and neighbors, after which the remains, in charge of undertaker Plummer, were taken to the old home at Glen Springs and there deposited beside those of her husband, who had preceded her some years ago. She leaves nine children to mourn the loss of mother. Mrs. T. C. Thoroughman of this place, with whom she spent her last years, together with the following children were spent at the end: Mrs. D. A. Jellies Make Good Drink.

With la grippe and feverish colds, cooling drinks are in demand. Chilled fruit juices are always acceptable, whether it is the juice of raw fruits, such as lemons, limes, oranges or grape fruit or the cooled liquids around cooked dried fruit or preserves. Mix with water, sweeten slightly, and put in a teaspoonful of shaved ice. Tart jellies make a refreshing drink, especially currant jelly. A nourishing drink is made by mixing the water off boiled rice with orange juice or currant jelly and water. Lemonade is made tasty with a dash of nutmeg.

Deepest Lake in America.

A lake known as the Great Sunken lake, is reported to be the deepest lake in this country, and perhaps in the whole world. Located in the valley of the Cascade mountains, about 70 miles north of Jacksonville, Ore., this lake, which is about 15 miles long and four miles wide, is so deep that its depth cannot be measured. It is situated so far below the crest of the mountains that winds cannot reach it, and its surface is like a sheet of glass. It is sometimes called the "lake of mystery."

Knife Pickwick Handled.

There is a first-rate anecdote in Mr. J. J. Hissey's book, "Gossip of the Road," concerning the popularity of Dickens—or Pickwick. One of the two, but which one? Mr. Hissey was staying at the Angel, in Bury St. Edmunds, and was reflecting aloud on the fact that Mr. Pickwick was supposed to have stayed there, when his host indignantly exclaimed: "Supposed! This, sir, is the very inn where he stopped. I've the very carving knife that Mr. Pickwick used when he was here."—Christian Science Monitor.

Keep Smiling.

Happiness of heart and soul can be willed. It is psychologically true that the laugh which is at first forced may later be made genuine. Try it. Try reading the joy column of the papers and magazines. Treasure the good ones and pass them on to friends. Don't destroy a play because it is for laughing purposes only. Hunt such comedies and tell others of them. Start every day in good humor, with a smile. It will help brighten the day for others.

Packing the Soil.

It has been estimated by authorities that a man weighing 170 pounds, wearing No. 8 shoes, creates a pressure of 14 pounds to the square inch of surface where he steps. A horse weighing 1,400 pounds creates a pressure of approximately 19 to 30 pounds per square inch under his hoofs while pulling an average load. A tractor weighing in the neighborhood of 1,800 pounds exerts a pressure only about ten pounds to the square inch.

Birds of Towns.

Somebody must have a love for bird life. If these names, selected at random from the postal guide, indicate anything: Pigeonroost, Ky.; Lark, N. D.; Parrot, Ky.; Sparrow, Ky.; Swan, Tex.; Swallow, Ky.; Wren, S. C.; Crow, W. Va.; Blue Jay, W. Va.; Nightingale, Ala.—Columbia State.

DAVID'S HOUR

By JACK LAWTON.

(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

David sat before the fireplace in the cozy room and looked earnestly at his old friend. The room was lined with books; and a desk stood in the center; half curtains were at the window, where ruffled curtains had been, and a doctor's sign with gilt lettering hung above: David had done his best to turn his mother's sitting room into a doctor's consulting office. The old friend looked back at David, and sympathy was in his gaze.

"It's tough," he said, "after all the years you've planned for this, boy, to have it fall through: Your mother and me used to sit and talk of the time when you'd come back from college and have the whole town calling you for their sick. You'd a made a good doctor, too; there's no question about it. Better'n the big one that's come out of the city. He's had none of the struggles you've had to find his place.

"His dad is one of the big specialists in the city. Thought it would be a good thing to start his son on his own feet, so he bought him the Calhoun place and got him established. We sure did need a doctor. Old Doc Wells dropping off sudden, this new one fell soft into his place, the place that should have been waiting for you, David. Everyone seemed to take to Doc Brereton right off. Maybe it was his fine car that impressed 'em, or the housekeeper in cap and tucker that opens the door at his house. Anyway, I'm sure there's nothing for you here now, son, an' you'd better hunt another stand. Rent this house and start out for another town. We'll miss you, but I'm telling you just how things are."

David nodded gravely, "Thanks," he replied, "but I guess I'll stick; Doctor Brereton may take all the regular patients. I can see how our families would welcome a city practitioner. But there must be others who could use me; the lower town folks perhaps, or those across the bridge."

"Land alive boy!" the old man exclaimed, "how'd you expect to make a living off those folks! Most of 'em's on charity now."

"I always have managed to live some way," David said slowly.

"You have, David." Dan warmly agreed, "and against all odds you've reached your chosen goal."

The old man paused. "Helen Carson rides out a good deal with Doc Brereton," he said brusquely, "some folks think it's going to be a match. Sure would suit her father down to the ground; you know how Carson is—no one round here ever was good enough for his daughter."

"No one, you mean," David corrected, "had money enough, in his opinion, to be eligible as a husband for his daughter."

"That's it," Dan said, "and the girl cares so much for her fool father that she'd never cross him. Well, good night David, I'm sorry you haven't a better welcome."

David decided to stick and do what he could. He met Nell next day. She was driving with the capable and confident Brereton, and after her little eager cry, Nell had in a whispered word asked to be allowed to speak to him.

He was fortunate in meeting the girl after that, down by the bridge now white with the snows of winter, or in the wood road perhaps, with evergreens on either side. And Nell confessed to him that Hal Brereton wanted her for his wife, and that her father wanted it too.

"And you care for him, Nell?" he managed to ask.

The girl regarded him quietly.

"Certainly not, David," she said; "I shall never marry Hal Brereton."

David's heart sang as he walked home alone.

From despairing, waiting hours of idleness, the telephone called him. He was wanted at Hillcrest.

"I'll come at once," he responded, and started unbelievingly.

Hillcrest was the new doctor's assured province. The phone called again as David drew on his coat—then still again! He was to be very busy, he told himself jubilantly. Then came the explanation. Old Dan gave it over the wire.

"The epidemic has caught Doctor Brereton," he said. "He's a sick man, and his patients are all scared to death because there isn't another doctor within two miles, and not one would venture out on these roads in this blizzard and weather. Go to it, Davy; cure 'em all up, and make your reputation."

And that is exactly what David did. Fearlessly he attended every sickbed, thankful for the experience which had been given him in this dreaded disease. His skill was soon recognized—David had arrived. Carson, the important, was the latest to succumb. And he was obliged to call David. There was no other way. Doctor Brereton had gone to the city to convalesce. He had admitted to David that he intended to remain there.

"Won't be room for two of us now in that small burg," he had said. And as David bent over the sick man, to the great Carson came the realization of his own helplessness, and a strange, new confidence in another's power.

"You'll pull me through?" he begged feebly.

"I will," David forcefully replied, And he did.

But as he stood there, with Carson's trustful hand clasping his, and with Nell's shining eyes upon him—that was David's hour.

Ancient Money.

The first coins used by the civilized nations of the ancient world were small metal ingots stamped with a ruler's seal. It is probable that they were first minted in Lydia, the rich Asian kingdom of which Croesus was the most famous king. The "punch-marked" coins of India are assigned to a period older even than that of Buddhism.

TWO NANS

By MILDRED WHITE.

(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

I sat in the attic beside the long closed trunk which held Aunt Nan's girlish finery. I could not remember Aunt Nan. She had gone away when I was a child, and later she died. But it seemed that the memory of this departed aunt, with her name bestowed, was to be my continued warning against frivolity and light-mindedness. I had been brought up by Aunt Minerva in loneliness and severity. It was mother's cross, and hers, that I should resemble Aunt Nan to a marked degree; bringing back constantly recollection of sorrow and humiliation. It seemed that Aunt Nan had brought this suffering into Aunt Minerva's life and to many others by her charm of attraction, thoughtlessness and—so her sister said—by utter heartlessness. But ever in my disciplined childish mind was a sneaking admiration for this same witch of an aunt, who with her small brown face had triumphed in love. And as she could not keep all the love bestowed, I reasoned, what could she do but cast it back again? I used to study the painting of my mother and her two sisters and ponder over it.

"You see," Nan's twinkly eyes seemed to say, "I'm more sinned against than sinning. It is my elder sisters who enjoy the advantages; if I happened to win love here and there, can I help that?"

The pathetic curve of Nan's lips begged the question. Startled, I turned to the glass to see another small face with the same twinkly eyes, the same lips drooping in the mirror grieved with life as it was. The "resemblance was remarkable;" as I had heard mother and Aunt Minerva so often remark; and because of that resemblance, I lived until the age of twenty-five the secluded life of a cloister. Aunt Nan's unforgivable sin was the winning of a heart—which had been duly given and signed to Minerva. Aunt Minerva's fiance had not happened to meet the elusive Nan until after he was publicly betrothed to Aunt Minerva. But as soon as he did know the queer little creature it was all off with Minerva and he told her so honestly. He could care for no one else thereafter, he said, but the little girl who had bewitched him; and though Aunt Nan would have nothing to do with the man after that, he lingered only long enough to learn of her affair with David, then he went away forever. David Burnie was the only son of the old Scotch doctor whom everybody loved; and David was studying medicine in the city that he might soon fill his father's place. David had played with Nan when she was a schoolgirl. He'd loved her throughout high school days; and though Nan laughed and treated him in her charming impersonal manner, still David's hope was to win her for his wife when he should be through with his college, and take her to his father's home to dispense happiness there as its mistress. Nan allowed him to think that perhaps this hope might come. Then as David was about to graduate Nan wrote him from California, where she had gone to visit, that if he'd throw over the doctor business altogether and go out there where there was a wonderful opening for him in her uncle's business concern, she might marry him there. David threw over his career without a regretful thought and went to her; and the old doctor, who was getting too old to carry on his practice longer, closed his office door in silence and closed his heart to David. And when David reached California, Nan was married. She "had not meant to be," she told David tearfully, but this man who loved her had felt so terribly when he learned of David's coming. And this was the Nan who had been held up to me in warning. David never came back. No one knew what became of him. There were stacks of David Burnie's letters in the trunk which Nan left so long ago here in her home. I loved to read them on long idle afternoons and I pictured David to myself a man of noble sympathies, the hero of every book I read. There was a picture of David, too, and I liked the fine seriousness of his face. And on this particular afternoon I drew from the trunk a muslin dress covered with lavender roses and fancifully I tied its violet ribbons about my waist, then standing before the mirror I parted my brown hair as Aunt Nan's was parted in the picture and I smiled again at the replica of myself. Perhaps some of Nan's mischievous daring may have been evoked from her dress for I started with unwonted gayety down the stairs to flash myself upon Aunt Minerva's gaze. She was not on the veranda, as I had expected, but a man stood there, a man who had been ringing the bell without response. He was a stranger, a man of distinguished appearance. Then all at once I recognized his face.

"David," I cried impulsively. "David Burnie!" for it was he—the same fine face, so seriously kind. There were patient wrinkles now about his mouth and eyes, his temples were touched with gray, but this was my hero still, the man whose character I had read in the lines of his letters. And David stood there as one bewitched. Indeed I think he was.

"Nan," he murmured, unbelievingly, "Nan—come back again." And I knew that it was to be mine to make up to him for that he had lost—that I was to keep the faith.

Plastic Amputations.

Dr. G. Bosch Arana of Buenos Ayres has made a remarkable success in modeling the stump of an amputated thigh by the plastic operation. In the Semana Medica (Buenos Ayres) he gives details of the way he remodels the stump so as to utilize the individual muscles and describes the extent to which the man moves his foot, thus walking by the natural bending of knee and ankle.

THE MOONSHINE TRAIL

Human Heart Drama in Six Parts

A BLACKTON PRODUCTION

Best Picture We Have Seen in Years is the Verdict of All Who Saw "Moonshine Trail" at The Temple Last Night. See It Tonight —Also Jack Dempsey in "Dare-Devil Jack"

A picture that came to us almost unheralded, "Moonshine Trail," shown at the Temple last night for the first time in the city, proved to be one of the best pictures the Temple has ever had the pleasure of showing.

It contains all the elements that go to make up a most wonderful production—suspense, thrills, action, wonderful outdoor photography, and just enough heart interest to make it hold the interest of the picture from start to finish.

The management seldom puts their approval on any picture to the extent of advising everybody to see, but here is one we recommend without any reservation whatever, for it is a picture for the whole family, from the baby to grandma.

The eleventh episode of "Dare-devil Jack" will complete one of the best bills the Temple has ever presented.

SUPPORT IS WITHDRAWN FROM INTERCHURCH WORLD PLAN BY PRESBYTERIANS

PHILADELPHIA, May 28—Support of the Presbyterian church in the United States of America was withdrawn from the Inter-Church World Movement, but it was decided to continue the new era movement and cut the annual budget from $500,000 to $400,000 at yesterday's session of the general assembly. In its action on the Inter-Church World Movement, the general assembly adopted the plan of the executive committee, planning for contributions of $100,000 for the ensuing year, to the movement, when properly organized, to be used for the payment of its current operating expenses as a going concern for that period and for no other purpose.

This, it was said, paves a way for re-organization of the movement along less expensive lines and will conserve the values already realized since the beginning of the campaign.

The 132nd general assembly of the Presbyterian church in the United States of America, which has been in session here since May 20, planned to wind up its business and adjourn late today.

Snails Color Ocean's Beaches.

A curious change of color with the tide is noted in the beaches of Snails' island in the Gulf of Mexico. The natural golden color of the sands is retained as the tide rises; but with the ebb of the tide the beaches become quite purple, a change that is due to the appearance of great numbers of tiny purple shells.

"I don't see anything unusual about that pillow," remarked a girl, turning to the guide. "It's a very valuable pillow," replied the guide. A HERO'S WELCOME

By DAISY M. TWORT.

(©, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Conrad is coming tonight!" Louise Pearson cried as she paused beside the counter behind which Frances Keith stood measuring off a yard of ribbon for a waiting customer.

"We can't tell just what time, but as soon as his mother knows that he is in town, she is to phone everyone on the street, and we all are going to turn our lights on, and so have a grand illumination by way of a welcome home. As you have no phone, you'll have to keep watch, and when the lights go on, you can set a lamp in your window. It will look awfully old-fashioned, but I suppose it is the best you can do. If your folks didn't belong among the old families, your poor little house would have been hustled off the street years ago," and with an irritating laugh, Louise turned away.

Conrad Roberts was the most popular boy in the small town of Firsex, and the girls had vied with one another in showering attentions upon him while he had been in France.

During high school days, he had shown a decided preference for the society of Frances Keith, but now he was coming home as a hero, it was rumored that Louise Pearson would be the favored one. Not only was she unusually attractive, but she was also a favored child of fortune, and her pretty clothes and her runabout were the envy of all the other girls.

Louise herself took it for granted that Conrad would seek her out first. She was sure he had written to her more often than to any of the other girls; an opinion which Frances did not share.

Extracts from Louise's letters found their way into the local papers, and were read at the afternoon clubs. Frances felt that hers were too sacred to show to anyone excepting her mother. It seemed to her quite too good to be true, that Conrad was on his way home at last; and it was with difficulty that she calmed herself sufficiently to pay attention to the wants of the people who found their way into the store that afternoon.

It was not until she was on her way home, that the remembrance of Louise's irritating laugh came to trouble her.

"I don't believe I will light one lamp at all," she said to her mother. "It will only emphasize our poverty, and seem such a stingy welcome to Conrad when all the other houses on the street are brilliantly lighted."

"Don't be foolish," Mrs. Keith advised, "If Conrad is the boy I think he is, he will realize that old-fashioned things are sometimes the most dependable. Set the light in the front window, and run up the shade, so as to give the house a cheerful look, then busy yourself about something that will take up your mind. It is more than likely that Conrad will not come tonight, but walk in upon us sometime in broad daylight, when we least expect him."

With a sigh of impatience, Frances arose to follow out her mother's suggestion. Going into the kitchen she took from the shelf a large lamp, carefully trimmed the wick and polished the chimney until it shone. As she lit it, she fervently wished that she had a fairy wand, by a wave of which she could change the feeble glow of the kerosene lamp into a bright light that would send a welcoming ray far down the street.

"Conrad never will notice it," she reflected dismally as she placed the lamp in one of the front windows. Having done this, she returned to the living room, where she settled herself to work upon the sweater that was to make her little sister happy on Christmas morning.

So busy was she that the minutes slipped by unnoticed, and it was with surprise that she heard the clock strike eleven.

"Oh! do you suppose that Conrad has come?" she cried, springing up and running to the door to see if the other houses were lit up. As she looked out, she was astonished to find that the street was in darkness, not a light to be seen.

"Why, mother!" she called out. "It is perfectly black out-of-doors. Even the street lights are out."

As she spoke she caught the sound of a footstep and the next moment a familiar voice said:

"Is that you, Frances?"

It was Conrad. "Of all dark places this town is the blackest!" he cried, as he made his way up the steps and into the hall.

"There must be some trouble at the power station," Frances said, trying to steady her voice. "Mother told me that old-fashioned things were sometimes the most dependable. How glad I am that I lit our lamp after all."

"I am not sure, but I should have lost my way, if you hadn't," Conrad said. "I missed the last train from Roschills and had to foot it. When I reached Firsex I found it in darkness; not a light in town excepting yours. It was my beacon star, just as you have been, dear heart."

"But Louise thinks it is she for whom you care," Frances returned in a troubled voice.

"Louise is well enough in her way," Conrad made answer, "but she is apt to be uncertain as her light was, and for a welcome home a fellow wants a light and a love that never fails."

Pleads Guilty; Driver Is Fined $25

Erran. Barelett, New Boston young man, driver of the automobile which figured in an accident on Gallia street Thursday night, pleaded guilty to driving a motor vehicle while intoxicated when arraigned in Municipal court this afternoon and Judge Small taxed him $25 and costs and ordered him to pay the damage to Albert Brunner's machine which he promised to do.

150 Percent Dividend By Goodyear

AKRON, O., May 28—F. A. Seiberling, president of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company, today announced that directors had declared a stock dividend of 150 percent, payable to common stockholders of record, June 14. The dividend totals $31,133,250.

The directors, to get additional financing made necessary by a restriction of credits, also voted to sell $10,000,000 in common and $20,000,000 in preferred stock, authorized but unissued. After this refinancing Goodyear outstanding capital will be $128,557,250. The company now has a surplus of $43,000,000.

7 Acquitted On Charge Of Being Traitors

ROME, May 26.—Seven persons accused with former Deputy Filippi Cavallini, of communiting "intelligence to the enemy" during the war, have been acquited here. This case has been going one for the last three years and at times seemed to have a close relation with the prosecutions of Bolo Pasha and Joseph Caillaux in France. Four former deputies were among those placed on trial. It was found the proof of guilt adduced by the government was not sufficient to justify conviction.

PARIS, May 26.—The acquittal of the former Italian Deputy Filippo Cavallini of the charge of treason in Italy will make no difference with his status in France, it is declared here. He is still under sentence of death in this country, having been condemned at the same time as Bolo Pasha.

Red Men Entertain

The Red Men and order of Pocahontas met Thursday night in Red Men's Hall, in social session. From the many well filled baskets which were brought, a feast reminding one of the old-fashioned Sunday school picnic was shared by the large crowd in attendance. Music and dancing made up the entertainment of the evening.

Saw Value of Good Roads.

The first man to recognize the importance of roads in relation to civic progress was Lord Francis Bacon. He wrote 300 years ago that three elements were necessary to the growth of a community—fertile soil, busy workshops and easy conveyance of men and things from one place to another.

Or, at Least, Try to.

No Issue Of The Times Monday

In accord with the policy of newspapers all over the country, to save paper, and in compliance with the direct request of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, no issue of The Times will will be printed next Monday, which will be generally observed as a holiday. The newsprint situation is so acute in this country that it is feared a large percent of the smaller papers will be forced to suspend this fall unless there is a material reduction in the use of print paper. Newspapers generally have agreed to curtail the size of issues, and most afternoon papers will not print on holidays.

Rumor Causes Corn Tumble

CHICAGO, May 28—Apparently baseless reports that the switchmen's strike had been settled gave a big tumble today to values in the corn market. The most extreme setback was in the July delivery, which at one time touched $1.62 and showed a fall of 6 1-4 cents a bushel as compared with yesterday's finish. For a short while, selling was unusually heavy.

Difference In Time.

In reply to our observation that he and his son and namesake resembled each other greatly, old Bill Silvers said: "The main difference 'twixt me an' young Bill is, when I put in a day at work I don't feel much like runnin' 'round at nights; and when young Bill puts in a night runnin' 'round he don't feel much like workin' next day."—Topeka Capital.

No Detriment.

Yeast—I see that blond typewriter of yours chews gum.

Crimsonbeak—Yes. I've noticed that.

"And don't you think it interferes with her work?"

"By no means. I had one before her who didn't chew gum, and her spelling was quite as bad."

Exit Humorist.

While making a tour of the southern states, we were driving along a country road, when a farmer came walking toward us. One of our crowd, a humorist, thinking he would have some fun with the man, stopped the car, and taking a small satchel and a magazine, gave a ten-minute impression of Billy Sunday. When he had finished, the man looked at him a little queerly, put his hand in his pocket and gave him a card. On it were the words: "I am deaf."—Exchange.

STORM BOUND

By LOUISE HOFFMAN.

(©, 1919, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Gee! the wind's blowing 60 miles an hour and everything will be drifted full by morning," prophesied John Becklin as he came stamping into the kitchen after feeding the beasts. "I thought I'd be blown away once or twice myself. I pity any one caught out in this storm tonight. Heard the 4:20 go up yet, mother?"

Mrs. Becklin, a remarkably trim, young looking woman to be the mother of such a stalwart looking son, was busy setting the table and alternately stirring creamed potatoes on the stove.

"No, John, I haven't heard a sound," she replied in a motherly tone. "But I thought I saw a sleigh with two come around the bend in the road a while ago. I've been watching every little while, but I haven't seen anything more of it."

She went to the window again. It was just dusk.

"Oh, John!" she exclaimed. "There is some one trying to get through the drifts by the old barn. There, the horse is down."

John Becklin came to the window and peered out into the fast deepening gloom.

"Why, it looks as though there was a woman in the sleigh. Too bad they're been caught out in this. But the drifts are soft yet, and maybe they'll pull through. I wonder who they are? They must be strangers, or they wouldn't attempt to drive through that spot."

"Well, the horse is up," announced Mrs. Becklin with relief, "but they are trying to make him go ahead. The next plunge and the poor animal will only go down again. Even if they do manage to get through this bank, they can't go on in this blow. It would be sure death, with night coming on, and it's growing colder every minute. Oh!" she gasped; "there goes the sleigh over. Mercy! I hope that poor woman isn't hurt."

She turned.

"Where are you going, John?" she questioned as he began putting on his things.

"I'm going to take down the bars so that man can come through the field.

He was gone, and the mother watched with keen anxiety as he battled against the fierce wind and whirling snow. Once he turned his back to catch his breath. Twice he sank out of sight, but finally succeeded in reaching the two weary travelers.

John directed the strangers through the perilous drifts into the open field and up to their barn, where the hired man took charge of the almost exhausted animal.

Mrs. Becklin ran to the kitchen door and threw it as hospitably wide as the storm would allow to welcome the strangers.

"Come in, come in out of this wind," she invited cheerfully. "You must be nearly frozen."

"Fortunately we both escaped, but such an experience!" returned a sweet young voice, as the man, divested of his furs, came into the living room.

"Myra!" he gasped, gazing straight into her clear gray middle-aged eyes. "Is it possible?"

"Wilbur," breathed Mrs. Becklin, scarcely believing her eyes. "I—I thought you were in the West. And this," she paused gazing at the pretty blue-eyed girl.

"Is my daughter, Una," he said briefly. "And this lad to whom we are indebted for our escape is—"

"My son," returned Myra.

After a moment's silence, "If it were not for the children, we might think time had almost stood still," he murmured.

Over delectable creamed potatoes, sliced pink ham, hot rolls and coffee, Wilbur Norcross told how the urge to come East had been too strong for him. In the fall he had bought a small farm at Fallsburgh. His sister kept house while Una taught school in the old Everett district about five miles distant.

Myra nodded. She had heard about a Norcross family moving into the village.

As the weather looked promising and as it was Friday night he had started out to drive Una home.

For three days the travelers were storm-bound in the mountains. It was impossible to shovel out roads until the wind abated. During this time a friendship and intimacy sprang up, which ripened into something warmer, and when the storm had ceased and the roads were open, Myra and Wilbur told the children the same old ever new story. Years ago they had quarreled because Myra refused to live in the country.

"Such a silly thing," laughed Myra happily, "because I live on a farm now and love it, even to being storm-bound and cut off from civilization."

"We'll make it a delightful binding for life," added Wilbur.

John looked at Una.

"I guess we have something to confess, too. It's a pretty short courtship but—but Cupid has been flinging his darts around so lively he has struck us squarely, too."

"The second edition, bound for life," murmured Wilbur. Then with boyish enthusiasm: "Let's make it a double wedding."

And so it happened that in a few short weeks the neighbors nodded their heads and joyously announced, "Spring's coming. The young will marry, but the old—well—they may. Sure sign."

Gunman Wanted For Most Cold Blooded Murder

CHICAGO, May 28.—Eugene Geary, alleged gunman and labor slugger, recently acquitted of a charge of murder, was sought today in connection with what police termed one of the most cold blooded murders of recent years.

Harry J. Reckas, saloonkeeper, was shot and killed in a South Side saloon late last night as he waited with his lawyer to discuss with James O'Brien, another saloonkeeper, the arrest of two men who are alleged to have victimized them of thousands of dollars through sales of colored water represented as whiskey.

As Reckas was about to leave the saloon, a man identified by witnesses as Geary, entered and walking up to Reckas, shot him through the body.

Three months ago when Geary was acquitted of the murder of Leonard Tripple, a taxicab driver, McClay Hoyne, state's attorney, declared the verdict was "a gross miscarriage of justice," and said the death warrant of some other man had been signed.

Geary was an associate of "Moss" Enright, labor leader and gunman, and Peter and "Dutch" Gentlemen, all three of whom were killed as a result of gunmen's quarrels and labor feuds.

Public Does Not Know, Says Sheppard

CHICAGO, May 8.—Representatives, of the public arbitration boards do not know enough about railroad labor problems to be fair, L. E. Sheppard, president of the Order of Railway Conductors, told the city club yesterday. He asserted that the railroad brotherhoods are unalterably opposed to arbitration boards on which the public is represented.

"The public should be left out of the issue in dealing with the railroad problems," Mr. Sheppard said. "The layman knows so little about the actual problems of the situation.

"The reason the railroads are in their present fix is because they cannot get the men they need and because the men who do work for them are constantly subjected to violence and anathema from industrial workers whose work depends on these same men working."

The public is more concerned in the stability of the railroads than in the cost of operating them, Mr. Sheppard said he was convinced, adding that this was shown by the same prices for the same commodities existing throughout the country.

There will be no general strike as long as conservative labor leaders are in control, Mr. Sheppard asserted and adding that he did not believe there was danger of a great financial panic because organized labor is a safety valve that will not allow the panic to come."

Fitting Expiring Sentiments.

To Vespasian is attributed as an expiring sentiment, "An emperor should die standing!" which seems to have appealed to two sixteenth-century English bishops—Woolton, whose last utterance is recorded as, "A bishop ought to die on his legs," and Sewell, who declared, "A bishop should die preaching."

Bass Drum and Viol In One.

An orchestral percussive instrument that combines the booming resonance of the drum with the range of the double bass viol, according to Popular Mechanics, is the latest in Russian musical novelties. In form it is a combination of both instruments, the four foot finger board being fixed to a skin covered drum.

Kill Is His Motto.

No mammal in the entire world, great or small, can compare with the weasels as hunters. They hunt their prey incessantly, following it by scent, and take the lives of a far larger number of victims than they need for food, says the American Forestry Magazine. They kill, and keep on killing, just for the fun of it; and it is only during the cold winter weather, when game becomes scarce, that they conceal for future consumption the bodies of some of the animals they have slain.

Original Pins.

Until the middle of the sixteenth century the poorer class in England used rude skewers of wood as pins, while the more fortunate had pins made of gold, silver and brass.

Carpenters Idle Monday

The Cone of Our Pine.

So hard is the cone of a pine in our western forests that the imprisoned seeds cannot be propagated in the ordinary way. The best way is to burn the cone over a hot fire until it bursts, when the seeds escape. When forest fires sweep the country these pine cones have their chance, and from them new trees grow.

"Sport Not Worth the Candle."

"It's a poor sport that is not worth the candle" is from George Herbert's "Jacula Prudentum," a collection of proverbs dated 1651, which had appeared in a shorter form as "Outlandish Proverbs" in 1640.

Rheumatism Has Never Been Cured by Liniments or Lotions, and Never Will Be

You never knew of Rheumatism—that most painful source of suffering—being cured by liniments, lotions or other external applications. And you will never see anything but temporary relief afforded by such makeshifts.

But why be satisfied with temporary relief from the pangs of pain which are sure to return with increased severity, when there is permanent relief within your reach. Science has proven that Rheumatism is a disordered condition of the blood. How then can satisfactory results be expected from any treatment that does not reach the blood, the seat of the trouble, and rid the system of the cause of the disease? S. S. S. has for more than fifty years been giving relief to even the most aggravated and stubborn cases of Rheumatism. It cleanses the blood by routing the disease germs. The experience of others who have taken S. S. S. will convince you that it will promptly reach your case. You can obtain S. S. S. at any drug store.

Expert medical advice about your own individual case will be sent absolutely free. Write today to Medical Department, Swift Specific Co., Swift Laboratory, Atlanta, Ga.

Labor Disputes In China.

Labor disputes are often settled in China by a chamber of commerce, and after the award has been made all the parties take part in a feast paid for by the side which won the decision.

"Electoral College."

Properly speaking, there is no such institution as an electoral college. The electors, who are voted for by the people, meet in their respective states and cast their votes for president and vice president. These are sealed and sent by special messenger to the vice president of the United States, acting as speaker of the senate. He delivers them to the speaker of the house, who in the presence of both houses of congress assembled, opens the vote and declares the result.

Salvation Army Drive Going Well

After hearing partial reports of the first day's work of the Salvation Army Home drive, chairman Henry Winter of the committee in charge, announced Friday morning that the initial day of the drive had been a marked success. No figures were available, Mr. Winter said, owing to the fact that most of the solicitation committees were a part of the Chamber of Commerce supper party which motored to Wheelersburg Thursday evening, and had made no report of their results.

Some of the committees, Mr. Winter said, did not do any soliciting Thursday, but decided that they would wait until the second day of the drive.

With the larger subscriptions, he said, the first days drive results will probably fall but little short of 50 per cent of the quota.

The committee in charge of the drive hopes to be able to announce complete returns to date Saturday morning. In order that the whole matter may be cleared up, as is desired, by Saturday night, it is requested by the committee that citizens have their subscriptions to this splendid cause ready when the solicitors call, so that all that will be necessary will be to fill out the subscription blanks and where possible, to make out the checks.

Leather From Rat Skins.

That the skin of the rat can be used for leather has been proved, even though an experiment with some thousands of skins imported from France proved in the nineteenth century that the manufacture was not commercially worth while. A pair of shoes made from the skin of the rat proved as soft as the finest kid, but it took six skins to make the one pair, only the back being stout enough for use.

PLAN TO MAKE YOUR SUMMER PAY

You young Americans just out of school, you who are expected to bear tomorrow's responsibilities, you who are expected soon to become self-supporting—HOW WILL YOU SPEND YOUR SUMMER! Will you idle away these three golden months or WILL YOU MAKE YOUR SUMMER PAY?

Before you decide to "take it easy" this summer consider the following by a prominent business man: "Employers are watching young folks as never before. Business men want to know what you are doing to develop yourself, to prepare yourself for tomorrow's responsibilities and opportunities. If you are careless with your time, you will be even more careless with theirs. Business men expect our young people to be producers."

In order that the young people of this part of the state might have the fullest opportunity to make their summers pay, our big school is in session throughout the entire year. We maintain the same courses, the same hours, the same faculty throughout winter and summer. Our quarters, the best ventilated, the best lighted, in summer the coolest and most comfortable in the city, make for an ideal environment in which to prepare for the future. Here you can make your summer pay; amid cool surroundings. Business men are watching you. LOOK TO YOUR VACATION.

THREE MONTHS SHORT CUT TO SUCCESS

During the summer we offer expert commercial instruction for ambitious young men and women—for teachers, students, clerks, telephone operators—for those who want to get a good start in life, or better their present circumstances. Our summer course begins June 1, and continues throughout the entire summer. Call, write or see us for information about our courses and tuition.

Urged To Use Chicago-Portsmouth Car

The Portsmouth Chamber of Commerce received a communication from the Chicago Association of Commerce today asking that business interests of this city be urged to increase shipment in the Chicago-Portsmouth freight car which is being sent out of Chicago direct for Portsmouth for the benefit of local business men. This car makes a three day run from Chicago and comes direct, not being side-tracked anywhere along the line. This car has been running for some time but of late the tonnage has been falling off and it is feared the car will be taken off if the tonnage is not increased soon. Many quit having their shipments come by this car thinking that it was taken off during the strike and freight tie-up. Such is not the case, however, as the car runs regularly. Local business men are urged to request Chicago dealers to ship their supplies in this Chicago-Portsmouth car.

Sweet Clover Meeting Proves A Big Success

The sweet cloverfield meeting Thursday afternoon at the Otto Zoellner farm Wheelersburg was a success in every way, 33 farmers being in attendance. E. E. Barnes soil specialist from Ohio State University gave a talk on sweet clover explaining the various ways in which it increases soil fertility.

A study was also made of the requirements for the growing of sweet clover there being three outstanding features as follows, heavy applications of limestone, firm seed beds and seed in oculation. These facts were demonstrated on the Zoellner farm, Mr. Zoellner showing several different pieces of ground, which care had been taken in soil and seed and where no care had been given.

James Folsom, Otto Zoellner and George Mathiott also made talks favorable to increasing the sweet clover field acreage. The men also discussed the "lime" station proposition upon which Mr. Barnes also talked. Ten of those present agreed to subscribe $100 each toward the establishment of a "lime" station. An effort will be made to get around from the N. and W. for a site for the station and if this is possible it is thought the money for such a station will be easily secured.

A very pretty ante-nuptial party favoring Misses Edna Dawson and Lonella Arthurs, two bride-elects of the Garfield school, took place at the home of Miss Stella McCall, 1012 Highland, when the teachers of the Garfield building entertained in their honor. The evening was delightfully spent with music and other diversions during which the honorees were presented, each, with a silver sandwich tray as a token of friendship and esteem from their associates. Delicious refreshments of ices and cake were served at the conclusion of this interesting event. The favors were corsages of sweet peas bearing out the color scheme of pink and blue which was in evidence throughout the evening in the decorations. Those present were: Misses Edna Dawson, Lonella Arthurs, Laura Long, Mrs. Ida Spears, Mrs. Katherine Ressinger, Misses Mary Oakes, Goldie O'Neal, Laura Warden, Marguerite Dawson, Julia Haas, Marguerite Ressinger, Olive Chinn, Florence Stitt, Mabel Hollenbeck and Stella McCall.

LONDON, May 28.—The Bolsheviki are advancing in the Kiev region and are engaged in fighting on the second fortified line of the Poles northeast of that city, it is announced in Thursday's official statement by the soviet government received by wireless from Moscow today. The statement says the fighting line runs ten miles north of Brovari Village.

This village lies about ten miles directly east of Kiev.

Ossian.

Ossian, a mythical Gaelic hero and bard, is said to have lived in the third century, and to have been the son of Fingal, a Caledonian prince and hero, whom he accompanied on various expeditions. The story goes that Ossian was carried away by his fairy bindmother to the "isle of the ever young," but he returned later, and then old, blind and alone, "Ossian after the Feinn," he told the story of the heroes to St. Patrick. In 1760-63 James Mcpherson published two epics, which he claimed to be translations from Ossian's poems.

Wanted to Remain Awhile.

Betty was looking rather poorly after several weeks' illness. Aunt Edith, who had not seen her since she was a tiny baby, after kissing her, turned to her mother and said, rather thoughtlessly: "My, how thin she is! She looks as if a whiff of wind would blow her away." This must have worried Betty all day, for that night when she had finished all the customary "God blesses" in her prayer she added this earnest postscript: "And, please God, make me thicker, for I don't want to be blowed away."

They Will Fight Man.

It is said that in England the weasels sometimes hunt in little packs consisting of a dozen or more; and that there are well authenticated cases of their having resented the interference of man, promptly attacking the latter, and absolutely placing him in danger of his life, says the American Forestry Magazine, Washington, D. C.

—THE OLD HOMESTEAD

A Tale of Sentiment and Business. Wherein Rural Folk Rise to Heights of Extreme Greatness

"WELL, Bo," remarked Pod, as he stretched out his avoirdupois on the creaking sofa of their uptown flat—"well, Damon, your Pythias is sure rusting in the hinges for the want of a little rapid-fire work. That lart-lemon damn near put the buffalo brand on me! I'm dyin' for a change of air and some coke-talk with a ready-money angel. Anything in tune with your Marconi that looks like the real bonbons?"

Pittsburg Bender yawned and scratched his head before replying.

"Not much, and that's a fact," he grumbled peevishly.

"What's worse," he added, drawing a check-book from his pocket and inspecting the last entry, "what's worse and more of it, we're pretty near down to mud-flat level. Our meal-ticket is just about all punched out. We've got to kick in with some sort of dough-winner mighty sudden, or——"

"Cut the 'or'!" chuckled Pod, sitting up on the edge of the sofa, his face brightening into smiles. "There's no 'or' to it! The only word now on the carpet is 'where?'"

"And 'where,'" added Ben.

"New Hampshire, that's where," Pod decided. "Tomorrow—tonight, this very P. M. if you say so. Strike tent and beat it for the uncut, says I! Oh, joy, ol, ol!"

"Is the sacrificial lamb chosen?"

"You're hep! I'm in on the best ever, and in right! There's a section I wot of where the moon shines bright on an old New England home, and also on the close-fistedest turkey-neck that ever sat in the rear pew to save interest on his cent till the collection-box come round. Said turk needs Missouriizing—needs it bad. We need the collateral. Do we connect?"

"Like forceps on an ulcerated tooth!"

"Pack the grips then, Bo. While you're doing that, I'll frame the necessary letter to him and then we'll hit the trail for little old New England."

And so it came to pass the following day that Mr. Jethro Farrar pulled a plug of black tobacco from his hip pocket and worried off a good-sized "chaw" while he wrinkled his narrow forehead over an envelope bearing his name.

"Noo York—Gosh!" he mused, seeing the postmark. He thrust his quid into his cheek and his small, greedy eyes brightened unpleasantly as he opened the communication and commenced to read. He read it once, thoughtfully, from end to end. He read it twice. The third time, he carried it up into his hay-loft, sat down on an inverted bushel measure and studied out the whole thing, letter by letter, word by word, line by line.

"Great horn spoon!" cried he, when he finished. "Jeems Rice an' little fishes! Eleven thousan' dollars!" He glanced fearfully around. "Ain't no chance, now, is ther, that anybody else could git onto this? I don't see how! Why, my gosh, ef they don't—then it's mine, all mine! Le's see."

For the fourth time he read the letter. It was written on cheap, lined paper, somewhat crumpled and dirty, and it said:

New York, may 10.

Mr. J. Farrar,

Sir and frend, this is wrote in a cheap Bowery lodging house where i am very sick and the doctor says I cant live not more than a week at the outside. J. K. BURNS.

P. S. the amount of money is eleven thousan $.

"Gosh!" ejaculated Jeth.

For a long time he sat there on the bushel-measure, cogitating. From time to time he nodded his head. Once he laughed outright—a cold, harsh cackle of supreme satisfaction.

"Can't see wah thar's any outs about it, can't possibly see," quot he. "Dunno who th' cuss is an' don't care a hoot in Hades. He's posted, all right, that's sartain. My old man did take in a tramp, eighteen er twenty year ago, an' that's a fact; yep an' the varmint did rob the ol skinflint of some money. An' now, now I'm—wall, gol-dog it! It's a danged good thing the ole man ain't alive!"

The impatient mooing of his kine in the tie-up below him roused Jeth from his pleasurable speculation.

"Darned if it ain't past one o'clock!" said Jeth, standing up and consulting his battered silver watch.

"Why, I must ha' been sitting up here more'n an hour, an' no time to waste now, not by a jugful!"

Mumbling and grumbling to himself, Jeth threw a few scant forkfuls of musty meadow-hay to his cattle, then clumped heavily down the crooked creaking stairs.

The May moon, almost full, conspired for three nights with a cloudless sky so brightly to illumine road and field and countryside, that Jethro Farrar, Esq., of Trap Corner, found no heart to venture forth with spade and meal-sack for the treasure-trove. Strangely irritable he became. He beat his cows, kicked his horse, and cursed his aged housekeeper with unusual abandon.

She laid it to cider of the indurated or northern New England brand, and said nothing. J. Farrar, she knew by experience, wasn't a good man to answer back. He had such forcible ways of arguing with stove-wood, or chairs, or pitchforks, as forensic points.

So passed three days of vitriol and bile. But on the fourth favored. A southwest wind blew up slaty clouds, heavy with rain; the moon was banished, once and for all; and evening came on chill and dour.

Anything but dour and chill were Jeth's spirits that night. Despite his efforts to maintain a gruff consistency with his previous behavior, he let exhilaration ooze from every pore of his long, picked-chicken carcass. At supper, over the beans and pie and hard-boiled tea, he even joked a bit with his housekeeper and laughed with cavernous, gummy jaws. Of a certainty, J. Farrar never had felt more kittenish since that time when he had shut off Ben Bolster's highway and had beaten him in the resulting fracas, when Bolster had "lawed" him for malicious mischief.

All the way up the long road from his farm past the marshes, then over Billings Hill, and so into Woodstock (where lay the Bennett place), his good humor and his greed kept equal pace with the rise of his impatience.

"No way in this mortal world as I kin dull, seems like," he assured himself as he pegged along the dark, deserted country-road. "Not a soul knows a skrid o' this here thing, 'cept me an' him, an' he's most likely dead by now. Ef anybody calls at my place tonight, Mis' Martin 'll say I'm over to the Grange meetin' at Foxboro. The Bennett barn's way to Hell-an'-gone off from the house, and I'll work without nary light, so them two city sports won't have no earthly show to git onto what's up. Oh, it's easy, dead easy, this hull gol-danged business!"

His pulse was running high when at about half-past eight he reached the Bennett orchard, a quarter of a mile below the barn. Darkness had settled.

Cautiously Jeth clambered over the stone wall, with shovel and grain-sack, and made his way through the enclosure, stumbling here and there, up to the great weather-beaten structure. Not a light was to be seen in the farmhouse, which stood across the road and a little further up the hill than the rickety old barn.

With palpitant heart, he laid his meal-sack on the ground, close to the northwest corner of the big barn. Then after a final reconnoiter, he spat on both hands, gripped the spade, an' dug. So fast his breath came, and so quickly beat his heart, that he almost choked at his toil.

He worked on and on as rapidly as possible, till he had made a hole some four feet square and three feet deep, at the exact corner of the barn. Then he got down into the excavation and proceeded with more care. He didn't now want to run any risk of leaving a single coin—and the money, he knew, was about four feet from the surface. That surface, he figured, might have filled in somewhat during the past eighteen years. He felt that now he was very close to the treasure, if not actually upon it.

Had he been in calmer mood, he might have wondered at the character of the soil. Cool judgment and examination might have suspected that it had been already dug over—and more recently than eighteen years, at that. But Jeth was far from analytical, that night, and darkness prohibited any occult observation.

At what he judged was about three feet and a half, he began pawing over every shovelful of earth. One after an'other, he searched them thoroughly, rooting the dirt like a long, lean razor-back. From very far away, came dolling to him nine faint strokes of a bell.

"Time's goin' fast," thought he. "I hain't g-g-got all night t' waste, an' that's a fact!"

Then, quite suddenly his quivering talons touched something that sent the blood surging into his brain and for a moment quite shut off his breath—something round, and thin and hard.

He clutched it passionately in one hand and ran the nail of his other forefinger along the edge of this object. It was corrugated.

"Money! Money!" he panted. "It's here! It's mine—I'm rich—money!"

Down on his knees he fell, and like a dog digging out woodchucks began clawing up the dirt in fistfuls, with crooked paws. Wheezing, puffing, trembling the covetous old man unearthed another coin—another and still once more—cart wheels, laden with the presage of great wealth!

Delirium possessed his brain. No longer he felt the drizzle of the rainful or the cutting night chill. Oblivious to everything but money-madness, he fought away in stark frenzy at the resisting earth. So great did his insanity become, that he got in his own way and lost all powers of discrimination. He snatched up worthless stones and crammed them into his pockets; he threw out coins into the wastepile. But, presently his native shrewdness reasserted itself. He came to his senses and stopped to think.

What should he do? Should he risk lighting matches to spy out the hoard? Should he fill his sack with earth and carry it home, there to search it over, bit by bit? Or should he dig still deeper with his spade and trust to luck?

Then, all of a sudden, inspiration dawned on him.

"My land o' livin', what a fool I be—jest a natchel, plumb, outrageous idjut!" he exclaimed. "Why, thar is a way to git it—all on it—as slick's a whistle, without nary danger, without hurtin' a mite, all nice an' easy. Good gosh, what be I a thinkin' of to go at things this way? Must be I'm gittin' old an' silly!"

Out from the cavity he scrambled and with feverish haste began shoveling back the dirt. He tamped it solid, scraped it even, and made a good job of it.

"Thar!" he exclaimed at length. "Thar, now, I don't calkate nobody's goin' to notice nothin' here, not till ter-morrow, anyhow. An' by termorrow, blow me ef the hull danged place don't b'long to me, to do with as I please, by gary!"

Hiding his spade under the barn, and making sure that the dozen coins he had already found were safe in his jeans, he struck off at a good pace across the field toward the road which led to Ezra Bennett's present dwelling, half a mile further from the town.

As he went, he chuckled to himself with huge delight: "It's all a comin' out fine, fine an' dandy! I tell yew, it takes a mighty gosh-durned complicated game to git ahead of me. Yew bet!"

• • • • •

It was close to quarter of nine when Jethro reached the house where lived E. Bennett, present owner of the farm where centered all the old man's hopes. Ezra was just going to bed when Jeth knocked at the back door. He greeted his visitor with no great cordiality.

"That you, Jeth? What in tarnation you out so late for? An' yer clo'es muddy, too! What's up?"

Jeth pushed past him into the kitchen.

"My land, but it's dark out!" he exclaimed. "I took a tumble comin' down Billins Hill. Reckon I be some muddied dup. Guess I'll wash, ef ye don't mind."

While he dallied with the tin basin and the soft-soap, Ezra stood sucking at a corn-cob, sizing him up and waiting for explanations. A shrewd old fellow was Ezra, inhospitable and full of guile. His red beard waggled as he chewed the pipe-stem. A glint from the glass lamp on the shelf struck across his eyes, which had a decided cast, and were redder than his beard.

"Wonder what th' Sam Hill he wants o' me this time o' night?" he ruminated. "Suthin' up that's sure."

He had not long to wait, for Jeth sat down without being invited in a rush-bottomed chair, spread his damp hands before the stove, and settled in.

"It's ben some time, Ezry, sence I was over here, quite some time," he began. "Hain't seed as much o' ye as I'd oughter, as I'd like ter, but yew know how busy I be—busy, an' not over-an'-above well."

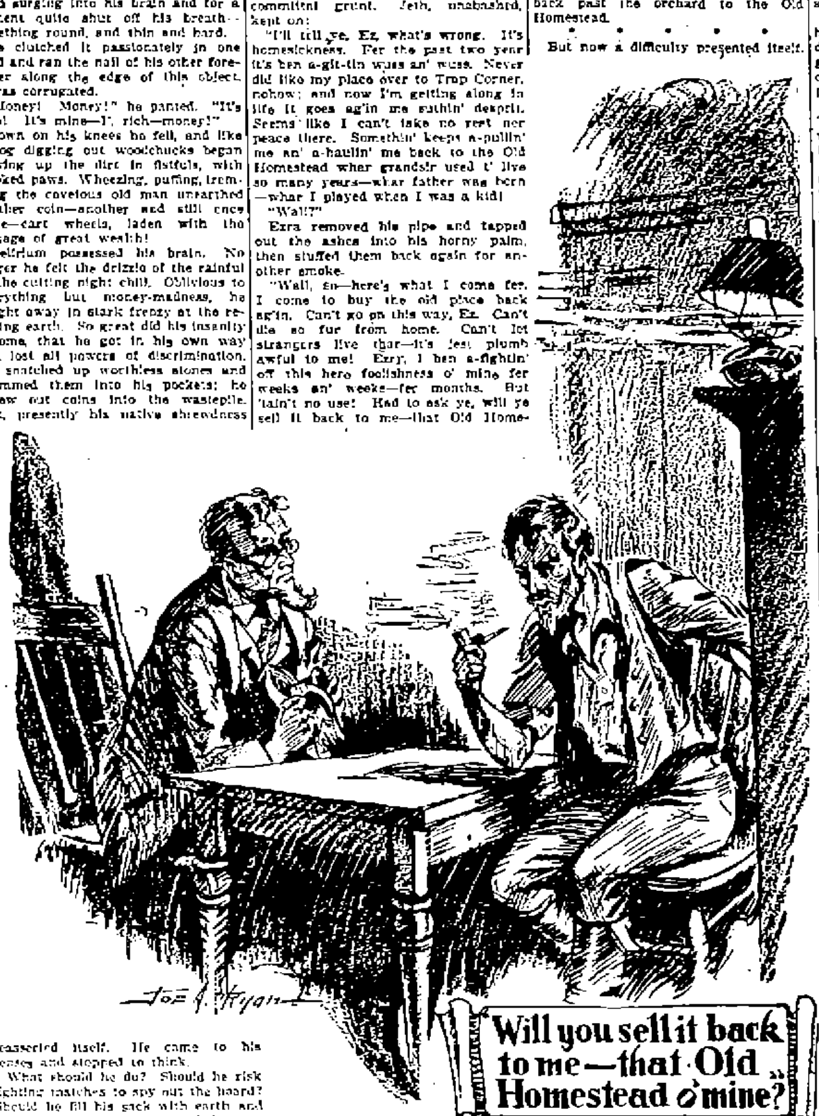
Ezra removed his pipe, spat into the ashes, and also sat down with a non-committal grunt. Jeth, unabashed, kept on:

"I'll tell ye, Ez, what's wrong. It's homesickness. Fer the past two year it's ben a-gittin wuss an' wuss. Never did like my place over to Trap Corner, nohow; and now I'm getting along in life it goes ag'in me suthin' despert. Seems like I can't take no rest ner peace there. Somethin' keeps a-pullin' me an' a-haulin' me back to the Old Homestead wher grandsir used t' live so many years—wher father was born—wher I played when I was a kid!

"Wal?"

Ezra removed his pipe and tapped out the ashes into his horny palm, then stuffed them back again for another smoke.

"Wall, so—here's what I come fer. I come to buy the old place back ag'in. Can't go on this way, Ez. Can't die so fur from home. Can't let strangers live thar—it's jest plumb awful to me! Ezry, I ben a-fightin' off this here foolishness o' mine fer weeks an' weeks—fer months. But 'tain't no use! Had to ask ye, will ye sell it back to me—that Old Homestead o' mine?"



Joe J. Ryan
Will you sell it back to me—that Old Homestead o' mine?"

He paused, overwrought with emotion. A tear glistened in his eye. Ezra, watching him narrowly, smiled a thin, dry smile.

"Will I sell?" he answered, shifting his pipe. "Will I? Why, yes, I calc'late so—ef the price is right. Gimme two thousand dollar, an' it's yourn!"

Jeth, gasping, sprang to his feet.

"Two — thousand — dollars!" he shrieked. "My Lord-a-mussy, it's robbery! I won't never give it—never in this mortial world!"

Ezra smoked a minute before answering.

"Termorrer it'll be three!" said he.

Jeth paled visibly beneath his dirt and tan. He saw quite clearly that Ezra was wise to something—how much he did not know—and that the old man, confident of holding the whip-hand, was going to drive him ruthlessly. With quick determination he decided to make the best of a bad bargain.

"That's nine thousan' clear profit, anyhow," he told himself after a mental calculation—"plus what I can git fer the place." A brilliant idea struck him. "Once it's mine, an' I git up all th' stuff then let Ezry know, he'll buy it back for any price I set an' dip the hull gosh-danged farm over an' over, from end to end!" No, decidedly, with this delectable prospect of revenge in view, the price was eminently reasonable. He held out his hand.

"Two thousan' it is!" he cried. "Shake on it, neighbor!"

Their cold, hard hands met in a Judas grasp. Their eyes blinked bitterly at each other. The deal was done.

Business settled, Jeth was not long in taking his departure.

"Thank ye, neighbor!" he said, striving to inject a little feeling into his voice. "Thanks! Ye've done me good—done me good tonight. I'll try t' do ye good some time, ole man. My pore heart's more at rest than it's ben many a long week an' month. The Old Homestead's mine ag'in, ain't it?"

"Might's well tell ye that ye can't occupy it till fall. Thar's two city fellers hired it fer the summer. Did yo know?"

Jeth did not answer for a moment. He had temporarily forgotten this check on his ambitions. But his confidence was sure.

"No matter 'bout them—they'll move ef I ask 'em, ef I tell 'em how my old heart is——"

"Don't yew believe it!" chuckled Ezra. "Pow'ful pleased they are with the place. They jest dote on it—fine air, grand view, an' all. No, siree; ye'll never budge 'em, not an inch! But no matter; wish ye good luck, jest the same. See ye termorrer, with the money, hey? Good night!"

Jeth found himself on the door-step, with the door shut after him. He heard the bolt slide, and Ezra's voice in a harsh, sneering laugh of senile delight.

Clenching his fist, he shook it at the door.

"I—I—— Oh, ye ole skunk, I'll git yew yet!" he hissed. Then off he stamped down to the road which led back past the orchard to the Old Homestead.

• • • • •

But now a difficulty presented itself.

What should Jethro do?

He stood undecided in the roadway, while the rain trickled from his hat-brim down his back.

"Gosh all hemlock!" he at length decided. "Nothing fer it but to finish up the job tonight, to git it over before old Ezry, thar has had the time to see 'em, to let 'em know how bad I want th' place, an' so to block my game. Here goes!"

At a smart pace he struck off toward the house which sheltered the two urban obstacles. His sharp knock on the door interrupted them in the midst of a most delectable conversation.

"Sure thing!" one of them had been saying, as with feet elevated on the dining-room table he blew a cloud of smoke ceilingward. "Surest ever, Ben; it's all to the velvet. We've got the place leased and secure for all summer. We've got the stuff planted back of the barn and the come-on knows it's there. Well, what more do we need?"

"Nothing but patience," the other made reply. "Once he's had a session with the shovel, he's our chow! If we don't shake him down a few, then my name's not Dr. Pittsburg B.!"

Pod Slattery laughed before commenting on this sentiment—a hearty meat-shaking laugh.

"It sure does look, Bo, like we're the real live steppers, the big dogs with the brass collars!" exulted he. "Don't tell me we ain't the proper ducks to paddle round these rural fun-ponds! We certainly have got this thing hooked proper. No matter what the phony is, ranker the better, these here vertebrae in the backbone of the nation always stand an' come across. This one's bound to put us in the Financial Who's-Who for many days, at a total expense of fifty bucks in car fare an' rent, plus the twenty dubs out behind said barn!"

"Yes," assented Ben. "My only objection is, it's too easy. Why, all we have to do is sock the anesthetic to him, administer the knock-out wallop, and evaporate. How high do you think we ought to start?"

"Start 'way up," say I, "and then compromise. That's good biz. If we miss this, it's me to the crape. Say, now, did you ever see anything shape up neater? All by the book, one, two, three; then the swat-bingo and a quick finish—Oh, joyful! What's that?"

"Somebody knocking! I say——"

"Sh-h-h! It may be the sacrificial lamb, already yet!"

"I'll go see. You stay here, Pod. If it is him, for heaven's sake keep mum! Remember, I'm the doc and you're my erratic patient; and, above all, don't cut in with side-remarks. Let me do it all!"

Ben, thus admonishing his unruly side-partner, put on a sober face and opened the door.

"Hallo!" said he. "What's wanted? Who's there?"

"It's—it's me!" came an embarrassed answer in a bucolic voice. Pod and Bender saw a lank, lean, grimy figure standing on the sill.

"Oh, its you, is it? Well, and who might you be?" snapped Ben. "Pretty time o' night to rout up a city doctor and his patient, I swear Come, who are you? What's your business?"

Jeth, somewhat disconcerted by this brusque reception, stood a moment undecided in the door; then, boldened by greed and the absolute necessity of concluding affairs that very night, pressed forward into the sitting-room.

"'Scuse me, gents," he deprecated. "I know it's late, an' all, but my biz with yew can't wait—it really can't. Fact is, ahem, I—I——"

"If you don't mind, I'll just ask you to shut that door!" cried Ben sharply. "Can't have drafts on my patient, here. He's a neurasthenic diplomaniac, you understand. That's right. Now, sir, what do you wish with us?"

"What do I want with yew?" drawled Jethro, shifting from one muddy boot to the other. "Wall, jest this: I want to tell yew I'm th' new owner o' this her proputty. Jest happened t' be a-passin' by, an' thought I might's well drop in an' inform ye."

"Owner? You the owner? You're crazy, man. An old chap named Ezra Bennett, half a mile down the road—"

"Oh, yes, I know all 'bout him. He was the owner—that's right; but fact is, I've jest bought th' place, my Old Homestead, ye understand—an'—an'—why, what's the matter with yer friend thar?"

"Oh, nothing; don't mind him. That's Mr. Duffield, my patient, as I told you. A neurasthenic. Nervous, very. He don't look it, but is. Involuntary twitching of his risorial muscles. Nothing at all. Don't pay the slightest attention to anything he may say or do—he's not responsible. So, then, Mr.—Mr.——"

"Farrar, my name is. Jethro K. Farrar, of Trap Corner."

"Mine, sir, is Dr. Evans—K. Wilfred Evans, M. D., of New York. So then, Mr. Farrar, you say you've just bought the place? Well, what of it? We've hired it for the summer. I'd just as soon pay rent to you as to the other fellow. Whats your idea in routing us up this time o' night?"

"Wall—er—truth o' the matter is, I've decided t' come an' live here myself," answered Jeth.

"Next fall, you mean? No objection that I know of."

"Termorrer! Right off!"

"The deuce you are! Why, man, I've got a three-months' promise of the place! Beside, we've already paid -"

"I don't keer a hoorah what ye've paid! I'll make it all right with ye." The old man's voice was rising, thin and gusty with emotion. He clenched his formless hat in his claw-hands. "I'm comin' back, that's sartain!"

"It's an outrage, sir, a horrible outrage on my patient!" vociferated the doctor, in a passion. "You do this thing, and by Lord Harry, sir, you'll suffer for it!"

But Jeth stood his ground. He was neither to be moved by entreaties, overawed by threats, or scared by prospect of personal violence.

At last, after an hour's heated discussion, Jeth came outright with threats at Dr. Evans, K. Wildred Evans, M. D., of New York.

"Out ye go, both on ye, er I'll law ye out!" the irate farmer cried. "Out ye go! But I'll do the square thing, as ye say I'd oughter. I'll pay yer rent an' give ye—fifty dollars spot cash!"

Jeth drew himself up grandly as he made this magnificent offer. For all answer, the Doctor strode across the room, flung open the door and shouted: "Mr. Duffield!"

"Doctor?" came an answering voice, and Mr. Duffield entered in bath-robe and slippers, ponderous, massive of jowl threatening of brow.

The doctor briefly laid the case before his patient, whose broad face grew mottled with astonishment and rage.

"You lobsterine!" cried Duffield, finally, unable further to contain himself. "You plow-pushing, bean-eating, leather-fisted son o' the compost-heap, you! Why, for half——"

"Calm yourself, my dear fellow!" protested the doctor. "Recall your dignity. He's not worth our wasting breath on. There, sir" (to Jethro) "is the way out. Pray take it and relieve us of the painful necessity of throwing you out!"

"A hundred, then!" cried Jethro, standing to his guns.

"See here, you," spat Duffield with ugly emphasis. "We ain't no men to be juggled with. We know the law; we're wise. O. K. see? Your game's too thin, that's what. I'm hep. There's some reason why you want us to vamoose, now ain't there? Some all-fired good reason—something valuable you happen to know about, eh? This farm here——"

"My Old Homestead!" panted Jethro. His teeth were chattering with the fear that clutched his covetous old heart.

"Homestead, pink! It's more than Homestead you're diggin' out. There's somethin' on this place you want, an' mean to have. Don't tell me there ain't. Don't—you—dare tell me there ain't! Well then, if that's so, why ain't him and me entitled to it, eh? Sue us all you please, an' be hanged, it takes time, that will, and in the meantime, we'll turn this jay's paradiso upside down, find whatever there is to find, an' own it. Possession's nine points, don't forget that! The law?

"Why——"

"Five hundred!" fairly shouted Jethro in despair. Now that the golden board was menaced, all his penurious niggling rapidly went by the board. After all, beside eleven thousand, what were a few hundred dollars?

"Make it an even thousand and we go, early tomorrow morning, with no questions asked," put in the physician.

"If you don't, you go, and we stay till Hell freezes, if we have to fight it out with lead!" Duffield supported him.

"A thousand, yes, all right!" groaned Jeth, sinking into a chair with trembling limbs. "I'll pay it over, in cash, termorrer mornin' early. Only go that's all!"

"You'll pay it tonight!" insisted the doctor. "Plus the rent!"

So it befell that, cowed, beaten, trembling with the lust of unearned gain, Jethro made off once more through the night, bound homeward the Lousa Brick Savings-bank.

Some hours later, with one thousand and seventy dollars in good bills stowed safely in Ben's wallet, the two pals stood in the road before the Old Homestead. Inside the house sat Jethro, now in full possession. Fevered was he, and wild of eye.

"My Cald, wait till they're gone!" thought he. "Wait till I'm free an' clear t' dig—an' dig—an' dig! Money! 'Leven thousand dollars! I'm rich, rich! Money. Lemme at it!"

• • • • •

Not yet the end of this mild tale—not yet, but soon. For as day dawned and our two virtuous friends, footsore yet light of heart, tramped over Billings Hill, half-way from Woodstock to the railroad station at Green Valley Junction, Jethro Farrar sat before the kitchen table in the Old Homestead, thinking.

On his wrinkled brow stood forth bright, glistening drops of chilly sweat. Abject, anguished, annihilated was Jeth—and the cause of it all was one of his silver dollars which, under the feeble rays of the lamp, lay before him on the table.

He stared at it with glassy eyes, snatched it up, examined it, flung it down again, and burst into a long whimpering, wailing moan.

"Oh—oh!" he cried. "The date! Eighteen year ago th' letter said! That's 1897, ain't it? Ain't it 1897?"

No answer to his cry of pain. Once more he scanned the coin. Out burst a choking shriek of woe: "Eighteen-ninety-seven! But this is dated 1904!"

Then, in a flash of comprehension, the awful verity broke in on him. Up he started, flinging the chair backward. Hatless he bolted from the room, out of the house, with a wild, incoherent trail of rural profanity streaming behind him like an oriflamme.

In two minutes he had wrenched open the stable door, had jerked from her repose the old, gray, rawboned mare inside, had flung himself on her bare back; and, with falling whip and drumming boot-heels, was rushing her up through the rocky pasture, through the woods, over the hills, and so away on a bee-line short cut, wilder than any steeplechase, toward Green Valley Junction.

Meanwhile Pod and Bender, best foot forward, were making tracks toward safety.

Joyful and care-free, our worthy and honest friends made way, unmindful of destiny, which, on a gray mare, was pushing 'cross-country with malevolent intention.

But at the little gingerbread station, what an awakening was there! For, as they reached the platform ten minutes before train-time, there came a rush at them, a hornet-buzzing of attack—and the fight was on!

"Thar they be, sheriff—thar they be!" they heard the voice of Farrar shrieking. "Take 'em both! Shell-game!—Gold-brick dodge an' bunco! Catch 'em. Grab that skinny feller, can't ye? Git th' un, anyhow! Git after t'other one, yew men—I can't do no more—plumb beat out—don't let 'em go!"

Pod, turning to flee Fate (in the shape of a constable with a tin star on his breast and a hickory wagon-spoke in his dexter mitt), felt something like a bolt of lightning smite him on the skull. Stars scintillated. A thought flashed over him: "That dollar—that last extra dollar I chucked in for to make it twenty-one, three sevens—what was the date?" Then he threw out both fat hands, staggered, and fell.

True as a die to his pal, he managed to cry: "Beat it, Ben! Then his ego blent with Nirvana, and he entered into a very deep though temporary peace.

As for Dr. Pittsburg Ben? Both his trained fists clove out a path for him through the obstreperous horde. The grappling rurals stayed him not. And once outside the circle, in the gloom of that early, rainy May morn, with the whole of a big, dark, thickly-forested New England outdoors to run in, half an hour put him (with the thousand and seventy dollars) far away in sylvan and impenetrable solitudes.

"Pod, au revoir!" he mused with wonder how in Tophet the game had slipped. "Not goodby, Pod. Just au revoir. I'd like to see the local jail that can keep you inside long, while I'm outside! But as for you, friend Jeth, as for you, Old Homestead, a long, last, glad farewell!"

Then in his woodland fastness he sat down to rest, to smoke, to think, to reckon how he should best jump the next blind-baggage, southward-bound.

Masonic League Roll Off Booked For This Evening

The climax in Masonic Bowling League circles will take place this evening at 7 o'clock, Central Standard time, when the Scribes and Diamonds will meet in a crucial series to determine the championship of the classy organization. The two teams are winners for the first and second half flags and one or tother will be crowned as champions at the conclusion of the match, total pins to count. President Stritmatter announced this morning that umpires for both foul line and pins, together with scorers for both clubs would be named before the game started.

Captain Patton of the Scribes made the following statement after a good night's sleep: "I have the utmost confidence in my men—they are always equal to any emergency and right now are in fine trim for the series. They will win handily and with plenty of pins to spare. And, by the way, watch my smoke this evening."

Captain Eynon of the Diamonds gave vent to the following terse interview: "There will be nothing to the series but the Diamonds. We are easily the masters of the Scribes and expect to take the series by not less than two hundred pins. The Scribes will not win a game."

With two such diversified opinions, it is easy to see there is going to be some one placed in the Tom Cheatwood prophet class. Which one it will be to decorate the seat next to Tom remains to be determined.

The league schedule was closed last night by the Lumberjacks taking three in a row from the crippled Lemons. The scores:

BIG DAY IN BOSTON, RUTH GETS TWO HOMERS AND REAL FIGHT IS STAGED

BOSTON, May 28—An assault upon Umpire Hildebrand by Pitcher Shawkey, of New York, in the fourth inning, resulting in Shawkey receiving a scalp wound from the umpire's mask, created excitement in the first game of the series with the Red Sox today, which New York won, 6 to 1. "Babe" Ruth made two home runs sending the ball once into the right field beachers and the second time over the left center field fence, this giving him a total of 10 for the season.

New York players protested strongly when Hildebrand enabled Boston to make its only tally in the fourth by sending Schang to first on balls with the bases full, forcing a run. After Harper, the next man up, had been called out on strikes, Shawkey approached the umpire, bowed and doffed his cap in mock thanks. Hildebrand ordered Shawkey out of the game, whereupon he rushed at the umpire and struck him several times about the head. Hildebrand defended himself with his mask and opened a wound on Shawkey's head.

A loosely played game was staged in the Wholesaler's League on York park diamond Thursday evening when the Gilbert Grocery Company's team won a called game from the Standard Supply nine by the score of 10 to 9. That was the score at the end of the sixth inning but in their first half of the seventh Standard Supply scored five runs and only had one down when the game was called. The game had to revert back to the completed inning which gave the game to Gilberts.

Both teams scoring early in the game each making two in the first. Gilberts kept up their scoring game finding Baggs easy for several innings. Davis for Gilberts was going fine until the fourth when several hits and errors gave the Standards four runs. In the sixth the Standard Supply gang got after Davis and added three more. In the seventh Davis walked five men and before the smoke rolled away five runs had been put across the plate. By this time it was too dark to see the ball and Umpire Doherty called the game.

Tonight the Portsmouth Hat Company and Hibbs Hardware Company will play. Last night's box score:

Pittsburg Beats Cleveland

PITTSBURGH May 28—Pittsburgh defeated the Cleveland team of the American League 4 to 2 in an exhibition game here Thursday. Blood Pressure.

Blood pressure is the pressure of the blood against the walls of the large arteries. It is determined by the force of the heart and the resistance in the small blood vessels. These latter either expand or contract according to conditions. This action is influenced by various factors, namely, excitement, nervousness, poisons in the system and hardening of the arteries.

Thanks to their hollow victory, 12 to 2 over the Excelsiors at the Seventeenth street yard, last evening, the Drews are out of the Industrial League cellar for the first time since the league was formed in 1919. Now that they are out, they expect to battle gallantly to remain above ground and have visions of a berth among the select society. The way they manhandled and massacred the Excelsiors last evening indicated the team is well balanced and ready to give a stiff argument to any club in the league, bar none. They won last night because they hit the offerings of "Slim Jim" Wykoff galley west and crooked, coupled with some rank errors and bobbles on the part of their opponents. They took the lead in the early innings, and kept increasing it at their will and pleasure. In the meantime Frank Geiger, tall and stately, was out there on the mound holding the Excelsiors in the hollow of his large and capacious mit. He was easily the master and deserved a shut out, holding the opposition to two hits and would not have been scored upon excepting for two wild duck clucks on the part of Howard Monk in the final chapter. These throws were allowed to go on unintercepted, but could have been blocked had the occasion demanded such activity on the part of Captain Hartlege at first.

The game was featured by some great clubbing on the part of the Drews, who most certainly fattened up their averages. Every man on the team with the exception of "Red Snapper" Thompson, got one or more hits. Floyd Smith and Benny Ross, who followed each other in the batting order, grabbed off three each, while Banfield, Doherty, Cooper and Geiger each got a couple.

The game, of course, was too one-sided to be interesting, but most of the fans stuck to the finish for they fully realize the truth of the old saying, "you never know what is going to happen in a ball game." Wykoff started the game for the losers and he held on until the last of the fifth, when he was relieved by Manager Joe Barber, who gave the team a shaking up, changing every position with the exception of Cornutte at first. But the change did not seem to do the club any good. Fact of the matter is that the fielding on the part of the Excelsiors was so poor as to be comical and the players themselves had to join in the joke themselves. But they were game to the last and stuck to the finish, despite the fact that they were hopelessly beaten and cruelly mangled.

It would take a ream of paper to describe how the runs were made. So the "jist" of the run-making proclivities will be cited without any minute detail. In the second a single by Ross, Doherty's sacrifice, a double by Cooper, Thompson's out and singles by Geiger and Banfield counted a couple of markers and sealed the fate of the Excelsiors. They added three in the third on hits by Smith, Ross and Geiger, with an error sandwiched by Catcher Lowry. Three more in the fourth were added on a walk and three hits, together with errors on the part of Gower and Donley. Two came over in the fifth on hits by Monk, Smith and Ross. In the sixth Cooper led off with a triple and scored on a passed ball. One more for good measure in the seventh on hits by Hartlege, Monk and Doherty.

The Excelsiors escaped a shut out in the last inning without the assistance of a hit. Barner walked and Kahmar popped to Ross, who had a big day at the bat and in the field, his catching being gilt edge all the way. Egbert and Donley hit to Monk who tossed wide to first, Barber and Egbert coming over. The score:

Well to Know the Worst.

Thirty thousand years ago, says a weekly journal, the seas around England were at a higher level than at present. It is difficult to know what can be done about it, but it is just as well that the matter should be mentioned.—London Punch.

Has Joined Brid's Team

Howdy Caton's kid brother Pat Caton has joined Al Bridwell's Rocky Mount team. He too is a shortstop and has been highly touted to Bridwell. The latter's team has been badly crippled by accidents.

Flat Feet.

Symptoms of flat foot are pain along the instep or even in the calves of the legs, knees, thighs, hips or back, often mistaken for rheumatism or other troubles. The person stands with feet well apart and toes turned outward. The ankle bends inward and the weight falls on the inner line of the foot so that the entire sole rests flat on the ground.

FOUR STARS ON THE PAN HANDLE TEAM

STELLAR ATTRACTIONS AT MILLBROOK ON SUNDAY AND DECORATION DAY

What will prove rare and racy treats for the fans of Portsmouth will be staged at Millbrook Park, Sunday and Monday afternoons when the strong Pan Handles, of Columbus, who have beaten every team they have gone up against this season, will battle Gabe's All Stars. In casting out for an attraction, Owner Gableman booked the Pan Handles as the best of the many offered. This team had appeared at Millbrook on more than one occasion and always gave a splendid account of itself. A local lad, Orlando Keller, appears in the lineup of the Pan Handles and his friends will be out to give him a most cordial reception. He is playing his favorite position, second base, and is going at a great clip this season. Keller is one of the finest characters in baseball and is ever able to hold up his end of any argument on the ball field. He is a good hitter and one of the best base runners in the game. He has added all sorts of pep to his team and will be out there fighting every inch of the way. Keller has a host of friends in Portsmouth and while the fans here will be plugging for the All Stars, nevertheless they will want to see the popular little fellow do well in both games.

Owner Gableman stated that both Sunday and Decoration Day games will be called at three o'clock, fast time. A record breaking attendance is looked for and ample provisions have been made to care for the crowd. Mr. Gableman certainly appreciated the fact that the directors of the Industrial League booked no game for Decoration Day. His players are made up from the cream of this league and a conflicting date would have disarranged matters. As it is the All Stars will be out in full strength in both games and will no doubt give the visiting club a mighty stiff argument.

P. H. S. Primed For Meet

Today's practice at Millbrook should put the P. H. S. track men in premier condition for their participation in the Tri-State Track and Field meet to be held at Ashland Saturday afternoon.

Huntington, Portsmouth, Ashland and Ironton are entered in the meet which will commence at 2 o'clock, Eastern time.

Coach Hess will take the following team to Ashland: Moritz (captain), Molter, Frowine, Wilson, Stritmatter, Steinhauer, Wehlner, Adams. The order of events for the meet are 100 yard dash, pole vault, mile run, shot-put, 220 yard dash, high jump, 440 yard dash, discus throw, 220 low hurdles, javelin, 1-2 mile run, broad ujmp and one mile relay.

The local athletes this season have not done any relay racing or hurdling.

A large delegation of students have signified their intention of accompanying the team, and some royal rooting is predicted when rooters from the four schools meet on the field at Ashland.

The dope points toward Huntington as the strongest aggregation, but the local dash men have cut down their time considerably, and the dashes, especially will, from all indications be closely run.

Huntington High will send 500 rooters to the Kentucky field.

Weak On Double Steal

CINCINNATI, May 28—For years the Reds have been absurdly helpless in stopping the double steal. Even as champions they look like amateurs when trying to head off this play which has cost them a lot of games. They are the weakest club in baseball on this particular play which should never be allowed to go through against a smart and capable defense.

Reds Play Town Ball

The Reds and St. Louis staged another hippodrome Thursday, the Cards winning 16 to 9. In the last two games the Reds scored 17 runs and Rickey's team 29. If this is big league ball, we pass. The Red pitchers outside of Mr. Ruether have been real jokes. They must brace or down goes the Moran Men.

MORE THAN HALF MILLION

COLONEL WILLIAM PROCTOR, of Cincinnati, announcing himself "angel" as well as manager, for Wood, testifies that he "advanced" $500,000 to the General's pre-convention campaign. He is not definite at all as to the nature of the "advance," but it is, probably, a new word for the present campaign, or the use of an old word in a new relation, underwriting, that is guaranteeing the expenses in a lump sum and expecting to get the money back from following contributions. If that be so and the contributions haven't yet come in, the Colonel can entertain himself whistling for his money. The Wood chances are not of the hue to tempt investment on them.

Bland as Proctor was in characterizing himself as an angel and giving the amount of his "advance" he was exceedingly squeamish about giving the names of any other fellow who had come across in sizeable sums, saying fellows were reluctant to receive notoriety in such matters.

There we have the hint of the evil, the lavish use of money to secure office. If the spirit that prompted it were worthy, if the intent of use was strictly honorable and legitimate there would be no shame-faces as a result of publicity. Men understand full well that when a vast campaign fund is raised a portion of it is going to base purposes. They are willing to wink at this but they would have the eyes of the country stone blind to it.

Now this base purpose isn't always applied in the coarse direct way of buying votes, though it too often is, but in corrupting services and influences. There are always parasites and grafters ready to enlist under the banner of some candidate, for sufficient consideration, and in this last contest in Ohio, we saw how it worked. Every fellow, who professed himself skilled in the arts of politics, everyone with a shady reputation had a job and it extended all the way up from ward to the state at large.

This will continue so long as some men give $10,000 to $500,000 to campaigns and the people accept it with an "Oh, that is the way politics is run." It is true politics is too frequently run just that way, but it is a practice that patriotism and common honesty ought not to tolerate in a single instance. The cost is bound to fall eventually upon the country.

LET IT BE HOPED NOT

FRANCE won the admiration of all the people for the steadfastness and heroism with which she withstood the horrors of five years of ruthless war that pressed all about and over a great part of her.

Her's was the trial and tribulation that it was not before thought possible for a nation to endure, to say nothing of emerging from victorious.

But is France victorious? Yes, if the naked success at arms is considered, she was; but if it be true stated what she now asks, she has suffered defeat in the loss of her pride and self-respect. For it is said France has requested the United States to assume responsibility for the German loan, the plan being for Germany to issue bonds, at once, to the amount of France's interest in the indemnity imposed upon her, the United States guaranteeing their payment.

It is a neat scheme, a clever one, but for the honor and glory of France, it is to be hoped it is neither proposed, nor is going to be. This country owes France nothing, except honor and admiration for the splendid manner in which she bore herself under supreme test. It would regret her much to see France become a mendicant among the nations.

A GOOD BEGINNING

THE revolution in Mexico, makes a fair start, after having won its way to power, its first action being to address itself to the case of one Francisco Villa in a highly proper manner.

To this jackal of the jungles it sent an ultimatum, either he must surrender such forces as were at his command and retire to peaceful pursuits, or else be reckoned with as open and deadly enemy. To this Villa rather contemptuously replied he would deliberates as to what answer he would make.

Strangely enough, though being Spanish by descent the new rule doesn't know any word as deliberate. Its demand is for action prompt and desirable. So instead of conceding any time for parleying, it proclaimed Villa a rebel, offered 100,000 pesos for his body, alive or dead, and instantly began maneuvring to wipe hi mand his band of marauders out.

It is going to be some job, judging from the past, but the alacrity and vigor with which it is approached are an augury for its success. Let it be devoutly hoped it will be so in short order.

The DIARY OF AN ENGAGED GIRL by PHYLLIS PHILLIPS

JACK DOESN'T DESERVE THE BLAME, BUT TAKES IT.

It certainly was a funny meeting that we had, for of course Jack made a dash for the grill and found me with just the ghost of a smile still left in my heart.

"Honey girl, what on earth do you think of me for this foolish mistake in our meeting?" says he.

"Oh, nothing, I suppose you have some good explanation," I answered suggestively, mentally resolving not to let him see that I was angry. A lady never does such.

Then very tactfully he unravelled the mystery, and to my consternation I discovered that it was I who was at fault—we had agreed upon a different meeting place entirely. I felt myself blush, for I realized that somehow or other Prince Charming had dazzled me into forgetting not only time, but place as well. And I had to confess to Jack that on thinking it over he had told me the Manhattan tea room. I leave it to you to imagine how I felt for all my hard thoughts of Jack, especially as he acted so magnanimously towards me, etc. Men are so much more charitable than women, of that I am convinced. I'm glad I'm going to marry one of them.

We managed to have a happy dinner in spite of everything and Jack's description of his feelings as he stood waiting for me at our real rendezvous just pleased me to death. He is really very much in love and terribly jealous of me, which I must say does not cause me pain—the thought.

After dinner we walked up Fifth avenue and looked in all the shop windows, which is one of my favorite out-door sports, sad to relate. Jack laughed his head off at my delight at everything I saw.

It really is taking advantage of a poor, helpless man to drag him from one gorgeous dress in one window to another in another; but it gets into your blood, somehow, and if one can't take advantage of one's fiance, who can one trifle with, I'll like to know?

"When we are married, dear," said Jack, "we won't need to just stand and stare in at the clothes that make your little heart flutter; we'll go in and buy them, no matter what!" Sweet words, these, in my diminutive ear.

"Will I honest Injun be allowed to wear anything that I want to wear, Jack?"

He assured me that such would be the case, as far as he was concerned. I declare I shall embrace matrimony far more joyfully than I thought would be possible at the start, because I am beginning to see that through its golden gates only does one pass into the land of the free.

Think of being able to waltz into any shop and select all the flame-colored or cloth of gold gowns that my heart has always craved. Think of being able to have my hair dressed the way I want it to be, and to have it hennaed if I so desire. I hardly think that Jack would let me do this gladly, however. He loves it the shade it is by nature.

And think of being able to buy all the wicked little French shoes and slippers that wink at me from velvet cushions up and down the avenue—wink and nothing more, for if there is one thing that mother abominates, it's such! "Hideous devices, positively indecent"—and heaven only knows what they are not to her way of thinking. No lady would wear them. No daughter of hers need long for them!

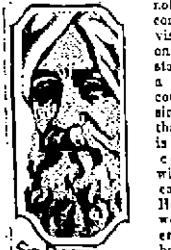
WHO'S WHO
In The Days News

SIR PRABHASHANK DALPATRAM PATTANI



SIR PATTANI.

England makes much of its colonial worthies and is just now bestowing special attention upon Sir Prabhashanker Dalpatram Pattani, whose white turban and robe, full gray beard and patriarchal mien make him the subject of admiring notice in any company. He is visiting England on business of state, having been a member of the council of India since 1917. In that capacity he is in frequent consultation with the political authorities. He finds cordial welcome in literary circles, for he is a student and writer of rare verse. The doors of society are open to him and he is a picturesque figure in gatherings of the social elite.

He comes of a fine Indian family and his home is in Anautwadi, Bhavnagar. He was educated in Morvi, Rajkoti and Bombay, and from early manhood he took active and intelligent interest in public affairs. In recognition of his abilities and his loyalty he received the decoration of Companion of the Order of the Indian Empire in 1910. Two years later he became a member of the executive council of the governor of Bombay, serving in that capacity for five years, when he was promoted to membership in the general council of the empire. While on duty in Bombay in 1915 the decoration of knight commander of the Indian Empire was bestowed upon him.

Sir Prabhashankar was born in 1862. In 1891 he married Rama Visvanath Vitalji. They have two sons.

BILLY WHISKERS by FRANCES TREGO MONTGOMERY

When the red-headed man asked the fat man to tell what the goats had done to him as a boy, he said: "Well I'll tell you. The first thing they did to me when I was a little shaver was to chew my hair off."

"Chew your hair off! How in the world did they get a chance to do that?" asked the red-headed man.

"It happened in this way," said the fat man, "I went to sleep on a bank by the side of the road one hot day, and when I woke up my hair was all chewed off, and the old Billy had commenced on one leg of my trousers. I stoned him good for this, but he got even a week after when he met me coming home from one of the neighbors with a basket of eggs in one hand and a pat of butter in the other. The first thing I knew I was standing on my head in the pat of butter and the eggs were all broken beside me with the basket turned upside down. From that day on that goat and I were enemies. He would do me a mean trick and I would get back at him the first chance I got. But somehow or other he always seemed to get the best of me. And this goat is as much like him as two peas; and how do I know but what it is the same goat, though that was years ago? Goats may live to be a hundred for all I know, and I don't care to take any chances; so I will attend to the horse and you look after the goat."

As these words left his mouth Billy Jr., made a plunge for him and landing in the yard clear over his head, ran off and disappeared behind some freight cars.

"Now, what did I tell you! He has got us in trouble right off for most likely he will never come back and we will have to pay for him. Drat goats, I say! and double drat this one in particular!"

Just outside the car yard fence was a Chinese laundry, and ever since Billy's car had been backed into the yard he had been watching the Chinamen at work at the open door. So now that he was loose he determined to get out of the yard and see what it was the Chinamen were sticking their cheeks out with and blowing on the clothes.

When he appeared at the door it startled one of the Chinamen so that he let all the water that he had intended to sprinkle the clothes with, fly in Billy's face. Now Billy thought the Chinaman had spat in his face on purpose and if there is one thing more than another that will make a goat fighting mad it is to spit or even pretend to spit at him.

With a plunge forward he butted the Chinaman through a curtained partition that separated the front room from the back, knocking another Chinaman that was bending over a washtub into the tub head foremost and upsetting the tub, Chinaman and all. Then he quietly walked into the back yard where some nicely starched shirts were hanging out to dry. These he chewed until the two Chinamen tried to drive him out of the yard by turning the hose on him. They had only given him one squirt when he went for them and butted one into a limp heap in one corner of the room, while the other took to his heels down the street, as if the old man from the sulphur regions were after him.

Spring

A song of Springtime and the New Year's morning,
Of life a song, and of earth's adorning.
From the South impelled, afar the Spring holds sway,
While Zephyrs scatter garlands in her way.
The hills by Winter storms swept bare and clean,
Once more are veiled in lace and velvet green.
Amid the wreck of Autumn leaves is met.
The woodland's pledge, sweet heart violet.
Where winding half-hid waters willows fan,
The gracious pipings of some feathered Pan
Are heard. Atop this emerald slope of plain
Stands carved from opal cloud a towered flame
Athwart the blue of Heaven. Now again
We sense the Springtime in the beating rain,
That drips in soothing cadence from the eaves,
Or rushes gently down the new-born leaves.
Then when the clear night falls, a myriad of stars
Gaze wondering earthward through the whispering hours.

Knew From Experience

At the workingmen's institute there rose a fierce discussion as to whether women should be given a chance of filling the high appointments.

"Twouldn't do," said a youthful and newly married firebrand. "Just think of a woman as secretary of the treasury. What do they know about finance, anyway?"

His effective pause was spoiled by an older man, who said, solemnly:

"You just go home to the missus next Friday night $5 short in your pay and you'll soon find out!"

New-York-Day-By-Day

BY O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, May 28.—Thoughts while strolling around New York: There is an aroma of romance about a ship pier. Thick chested seamen with gorilla like arms. Highly cultured savages. The ocean always makes me think of Conch-shells. I wonder why. Wish the boat would hurry up and dock. There is a dynamic undercurrent of excitement. Everybody feels it. I'd like to see a few crooks—the ocean greyhounds. Wish someone would smuggle a pearl to me.

Old salts looking solemnly out the forecastle. Have queer names. Like Hans, Olaf, Steffan and Cheek. Long lines of taxis and limousines. Some laden with flowers. And movie cameramen. There's the captain. Looks bored with it all. A face of cast iron. Now they're rushing up the bridge. Tears. Laughter. Embraces.

A factory district. Girls in patent leather hats. Curbstone lunchstands conducted by men who never smile. They seem to resent patronage. Junk men with rickety wagons and bony horses. Philosophers perhaps. A wandering violinist with long hair and dreamy eyes. Young toughs on the corner. I'll look as if I wasn't scared.

All kinds of little Paris perfume shops springing up. There's the ideal job. A perfume demonstrator. I like all kinds—even Florida water. But my wife won't let me. But sometimes I fool her. Slick rascal, I am. Three red-haired girls in short vamp shoes and net stockings.

Short Dan, the legless newsman. Married a vaudeville actress with a well known reputation as a singer. And they are happy. He can't go out much of nights. Traffic stops. There comes a fire engine. That would be the life. Driving a fire engine down Broadway.

Chris Morley, the columnist of the Evening post, has been having a terrible time with a nifty poem that a contributor sent him. The poem had to be printed during a dry spell and Morley would wait three days and then put the poem in his column the night before. The next morning it would be raining and he would have to gallop to the office before the first edition and yank it out again. Finally it got so on his nerves that he went right ahead and printed it anyway. Columnists have to take chances just like other folk. Even if they are not human. Here is the poem:

My potted plant is quite concerned,
It hasn't rained for days;
She wonders what her sin can be,
Or where her god sleeps, cruelly,
She lifts her pansy face to see
And prays.

Rupert Hughes is back from California where he has been roughing it around the studios and watching the filming of a recent novel. Hughes once told me that he desired to do for New York a little of what Fielding did for London. The more I see of New York the more Hughes impresses me as the true historian. It is difficult to believe the stories of the fast sets in New York—the men and women of wealth who guzzle cocktails all afternoon and evening and consume an endless number of cigarettes. But they are here. And no one has been able to describe them so well as Hughes. The novelist is a shy, unassuming sort. An impairment of hearing makes him hesitant about entering any conversation. But when he does—he says things worth while.

Heard It Rattle

The witness for the defence was being cross-examined. In answer to a question put by counsel, instead of speaking, he nodded his head.

Whereupon the court stenographer,

The witness replied, "I did answer it; I nodded my head."

"Yes," was the retort, "I heard it rattle, but could not tell whether it was up and down or from side to side."

Made a Big Difference

Bringing with him an electric atmosphere, the man strode into the newspaper office and banged his stick on the counter.

"Where's the editor?" he shouted angrily.

"He's out—he's out!" replied the clerk nervously. "What's he done this time?"

"In that advertisement for my valveless motor," stormed the visitor, "he's turned the second 'v' into a 'u'!"

Oh, These Women!

"What's worrying you, Jim?" asked a collier, as he met a mate at the club.

"These women!" replied the other, a newly married man. "They are queer cattle!"

"How do you mean?"

"Well," said the young husband, "this morning the missus chased me out o' the house wi' a frying pan, and when I went home tonight she was crying her eyes out because I hadn't kissed her when I went out."

Stopped in Time

Little Willie, who for some months had always ended his evening prayer with "Please send me a baby brother," announced to his mother that he was tired of praying for what he did not get and that he did not believe God had any more little boys to send.

Not long afterwards he was carried into his mother's room very early in the morning to see his twin brothers, who had arrived during the night. Willie looked at the two babies critically and then remarked: "It's a good thing I stopped praying when I did."—Plow and Tractor.

FOLLOWS IN HER BROTHER'S STEPS, WRITES PAGEANTS

Miss Hazel MacKaye.

It is not often that two members of a family excel in the same thing, but Hazel MacKaye, director of the department of pageantry and drama of the Y. W. C. A., may some day rival her brother. Percy MacKaye, poet and dramatist, has written scores of successful masks, but his sister makes pageants her specialty and confines her work to the Y. W. organization while her brother's works are produced here and abroad.
